The Royal Mail steamer Africa, Capt. SHANNON, having sailed from Liverpool on Saturday the 26th ult., arrived at this port yesterday morning. Her advices are three days later than those by the City of Washington.

The steamship Northern Light arrived out at Southampton on the morning of the 25th of June.

On the 23d of June the House of Lords was not in session.

In the House of Commons, Lord GODERICH moved the second reading of the Bill for the Registration of Partnerships. The bill proposed that all who entered into partnerships and traded under other names than their own, should be required to enter their names in a register, for the information of the public in general. Opposition to the measure was so strong that the bill was withdrawn.

On the 24th, in the House of Lords, the Earl of MALMESBURY read the official account received from the French Government in reference to the murder of the crew of the "free-labor" ship Regina Cœli, off the Coast of Africa, and the subsequent capture of the vessel by the British Mail Steamer Ethiope. It appeared that the vessel was not taken possession of by the Ethiope from any sympathy towards the negroes on board, but from a feeling that the crew had been murdered, and that the emigrants on board were pirates. The only difficulty that had arisen had been whether the French Captain, who was on shore when the emigrants rose on the rest of the crew, and who had all along declined to assent to the capture of the vessel by the Ethiope, was liable to pay salvage. He had distinctly refused, and in the end two French men-of-war removed the vessel from the Siberian waters, where the dispute arose.

Lord BROUGHAM protested against the negroes on board the ship, who were proved to have been taken on board in manacles, being regarded as emigrants. He trusted that a French and an English, or an American officer would be commissioned to inquire into the whole circumstances of the case.

After a few words from Earl GREY, in denunciation of the "free-emigrant" movement, the subject was dropped.

In the House of Commons, Lord STANLEY moved the second reading of the new bill to amend the Government of India. He explained its provisions, which have already been published in full, and submitted the bill to the candid consideration of the House, as a measure of reform, which would gradually lead to other reforms; and as a substitute for a provisional form of government to a more permanent and valuable form of administration, under the direct responsibility of a Minister of the Crown.

Mr. BRIGHT made a lengthy speech on Indian affairs in general, and stated that, although he considered the bill failed in one or two points, he would not oppose the second reading. He thought that the Governor-Generalship should be abolished, the position of that officer being too high and his power too great, and that India should be divided into five or six presidencies, with Presidents of equal rank, each division being entirely independent of the others. He urged that India should be governed for Indian interests, and recommended Government, the moment the bill passed, to issue a proclamation, offering a general amnesty as the first act done by the Queen, as the Sovereign of India. Mr. BRIGHT made sundry other propositions, and concluded his speech amidst loud cheers.

Mr. WHITESIDE thought some of Mr. BRIGHT's suggestions were quite impracticable, but, at the same time, he had no doubt the principles he advocated would be realized under the plan proposed by Lord STANLEY.

The bill was read a second time.

On the 25th, in the House of Lords, the Earl of CARNARVON stated, in reply to a question from the Bishop of Oxford, that Government was considering a measure to prevent abuses in the exportation of Coolies.

The filthy state of the Thames was debated in both Houses.

In the House of Commons Mr. FITZGERALD explained the circumstances of the recent outrage upon the British Cousul at Belgrade, and stated that the Turkish Government had promised every satisfaction and exemplary punishment to the parties concerned in it.

The India bill was debated in Committee of the Whole. Several amendments were proposed, but in each case they were rejected by large majorities in favor of the Government. One of the amendments, for a reduction of the number of the Council, was proposed by Lord PALMERSTON, but it was rejected by 62 majority.

The Lord Mayor of London had given another banquet to the Ministers, and a distinguished company was present, including the American Minister. In the absence of the Earl of DERBY from indisposition, the Lord Chancellor made the political speech of the evening, and in the course of his remarks he thus alluded to the American difficulty:

"I may, perhaps, advert to circumstances which have cast a transient cloud—but a light one, I hope, —upon the relations which exist between us and our Transatlantic kinsmen. United as we are by the ties of common descent, of common language, of similar laws, and of free institutions, any misunderstanding between us is a matter deeply to be deplored. The United States have evinced their identity of race with us by the sensitive jealousy which they have exhibited in favor of their national rights, but I trust the representations which have been made by my excellent friend, the Minister from the United States, and the mode in which they have been met by Lord MALMESBURY, will very soon restore those feelings of complete amity which have been ruffled by this trifling difference."

The House of Lords' reasons for insisting on their amendments to the Oaths bill are published, but they are rendered of comparatively little interest, says the Times, by the notorious intention of their framers to abandon the position, which is now for the last time ostensibly defeated.

The returns of the British Board of Trade, for the month of May, again show a heavy falling off in the exports,—the decrease, as compared with the figures for May, 1857, amounting to £1,117,556. In the imports a large increase is exhibited in all kinds of breadstuffs.

The Times says that Mr. SAMUEL W. GARRATT, senior member of the firm of GARRATT, GIBBON & SONS, agents to Lloyds, has been appointed by the American Government United States Consular Agent for Portsmouth.

The resolution of the United States Congress, in consequence of which Professor ALEXANDER was sent to England to procure an assimilation of the coinage of the two countries, had been moved for in the House of Commons by Lord EBRINGTON. Professor ALEXANDER was to explain his views on the subject before the London Society of Arts, on the evening before the Africa's departure.

The pestilential state of the river Thames was the prominent topic in London. The new Houses of Parliament were much affected by it, and it is even said that members of Parliament had occasionally to retire from their duties, and seek medical advice in consequence.

It is stated that FUAD PACHA, the Turkish representative at the Paris Conferences, had complained to his Government of the strange manner in which he had been received in Paris, and that his complaint had produced some sensation at Constantinople.

The Duke of MALAKOFF dined with her Majesty on the 24th, in company with the King of the Belgians and the two Belgian Princes.

The Daily News observes that the state of Mr BRIGHT's health having prevented him from taking part hitherto in the Indian debate, he has been obliged to condense into one speech all the ignorance and all the absurdity which would under other circumstances have been diffused in some thirty or forty. Mr. BRIGHT confesses that his object is finally to abolish the Indian Empire in Hindoostan. This startling paradox he prefaced with a protestation of his diffidence.

The Morning Post, referring to the same speech, expresses the opinion that if any of the principal suggestions of the member for Birmingham be adopted, India is lost to us and our heirs forever.

The Morning Chronicle says there can be no question that Mr. BRIGHT's speech contains much that may hereafter be used for the benefit of India, notwithstanding that many of his propositions may be met with practical objections.

At a special meeting of the Chester and Holyhead Railway Company, a bill was assented to for raising £200,000 on the preference shares. The Chairman stated this sum was required for the purpose of subscribing their proportion to the cost of the new steam-vessels for the improved postal service between England and Ireland.

Great damage had resulted from a severe thunder-storm which had visited the neighborhood of the Peak, in Derbyshire. The village of Hayfield had been flooded, and the fences and crops of a large surrounding area are swept away.

Prince ALFRED was, at the last accounts, at Valentia, on the vain look-out for the telegraphic fleet. He had been visiting Derrynane, the old house of DANIEL O'CONNELL.

At the funeral of Dr. JABEZ BUNTING, the noted Methodist Divine, there were more than five hundred persons present. One hundred and fifty-four clergymen followed the hearse, two and two.

It is said the prosecution against Mr. ALLSOP is to be abandoned. The Star says:

"It is clear that the evidence against him would be open to the same grave objections which presented themselves to the jury in the case of Dr. BERNARD; but it is also confidently stated that the defence are now in a position to show conclusively that one of the material witnesses in BERNARD's case was mistaken as to the facts his evidence was intended to prove. The course adopted by the Government in the cases of TRUELOVE and the Polish bookseller has met with almost unanimous approval in the country, and a feeling prevails that no good friend of the Commonwealth would desire to see popular irritation renewed by the trial of Mr. ALLSOP after the acquittal of Dr. BERNARD."

The Queen has appointed the Duke of NEWCASTLE, Sir J. T. COLERIDGE, the Rev. W. C. LAKE, M. A., the Rev. W. ROGERS, M. A., GOLDWIN SMITH, Esq., M. A., NASSAU W. SENIOR, Esq., M. A., and EDWARD MIALL, Esq, Commissioners to inquire into the present state of popular education in England, and to consider and report what measures, if any, are required for the extension of sound and cheap elementary instruction to all classes of the people.

It seems settled that Lord Advocate INGLIS is to succeed the late Sir JOHN HOPE, as Lord Justice Clerk of Scotland.

The London Times, at the close of an article on the the French emigration scheme, says:

"Whatever course the French Government, however, may think proper to take, our own is perfectly clear. The British authorities on the Coast must not only give no assistance to the traffic, but they must forbid it on every spot subject to the Crown, and, as far as in them lies, induce the African chiefs to repel the advances of the French speculators. Though frigates and gunboats may be forbidden to interfere, yet we trust that England has sufficient influence on the Coast to diminish, if not entirely to prevent this odious commerce in human flesh."

Reports were current that the restrictions imposed on the Press were to be relaxed, and that the interdict upon the Indépendance Belge was to be withdrawn.

The meetings of the Conferences were suspended on account of the indisposition of FUAD PACHA. His disease was an affection of the throat, from which, at the latest advices, he was recovering.

The discussions in the English Parliament, and particularly the remarks of Lord MALMESBURY on the French scheme of introducing free negro laborers into her Colonies, were producing considerable indignation in France.

On the 25th the Paris Bourse was rather more animated. The 3 per cents slightly improved, closing at 68 5.

M. DE VIVIENNE, Procureur-General of the Court of Lyons, had been appointed to the First Presidency of the Imperial Court of Paris, rendered vacant by M. DELANGLE's promotion to the Ministry.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says: That Prince NAPOLEON, instead of going to Algeria as Governor of the Province, will remain at home as Minister of Algeria and the Colonies, with the right of presiding at Cabinet Councils in the absence of the Emperor.

The decree nominating Prince NAPOLEON leaves the Minister of Marine to administer solely the affairs of the navy.

The Havre papers supply us with a vigorous protest, drawn up in Mexico by a large number of French residents, (who are more numerous than any other Europeans there,) denouncing the ephemera government now in power for dispossessing them of the lands they purchased in June, 1856, when large uncultivated tracts belonging to monastic proprietors were put up for public auction by the Republic, and found bona fide purchasers able to make them productive. These estates have been coolly resumed, and no money returned.

Rumor is afloat, says the Paris correspondent of the Globe, that British diplomacy having exercised some pressure at Madrid as to measures of Slave-trade suppression around the coast of Cuba, Spain had applied to NAPOLEON III. for support against any compulsory proceedings on the part of the British cruisers, and had met encouragement in that quarter. The policy of France is decidedly in favor of a disguised but effectual complicity in the transportation of negroes, whether kidnapped or "voluntary emigrants," and in proof of a disinclination to suffer Africans to emerge from the condition of workmen, a recent act in French Guiana forms the subject of a leader in the Débats. The transfer or purchase of land there is now subject to a most iniquitous tax, the object of which is to prevent a small proprietary from rowing up among the liberated blacks. Large estates and small patches of waste ground are liable to exactly the same fiscal obstacle, which is on a par with the duty levied at Civita Vecchia on "foreign liquors," a bottle of Champagne, or of prime Barclay and Perkins, being taxed nothing more nor less than a bottle of Warren's blacking.

The Constitutionel has a violent article upon Lord MALMESBURY's explanations in the House of Lords touching the case of the Regina Cœli. It says:

"The pretended slaves on board the Regina Cœli were not slaves; they were men who had been free for a long time past; they were citizens of two republics, exported from the United States to Liberia, who had freely contracted engagements for our colonies, and who had no other motive in revolting than thirst of blood and love of pillage. Need we add that it is false, entirely false, that irons or chains are to be found on board our vessels employed in the emigration trade? It is a pure invention. Everybody is aware that recruiting of Africans is effected under the active and able surveillance of French cruisers, under the immediate control of the administration, which places an agent on board every vessel employed, and under the eyes of the surgeon who has a responsibility to protect. The positive accusations made in the House of Lords were therefore void of all pretext as of all foundation."

The correspondent of the Globe remarks "The violent article of the Constitutionnel against Lord MALMESBURY's speech on the Slave-trade question, which was signed by the chief editor of the Constitutionnel himself, has created not a little sensation. It is prophesied that this article is only the beginning of a series of attacks on the Government press of England, with which attacks on Austria are to go hand in hand. But such prophets of evil have lost much credit of late."

The Univers talks in the same violent strain:

"While the Government of England recoils before that of Washington, and before the menacing speeches of Congress, it displays a desire to interfere in France, with the view of preventing the recruitment of free blacks on the African coast. Our neighbors too readily forget that Paris is not Naples; and they will doubtless very soon learn not to forget this fact."

The City of Dantzic had been visited by a very destructive fire. Several great factories, flour mills, and warehouses had been destroyed, but the full extent of the damage had not been ascertained.

Later intelligence says the conflagration destroyed 55 houses, entailing a loss of a million thalers. Five persons perished in the flames.

The Archbishop of Saragossa died at the age of 88 years.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post says:

"M. LAFRAGUA, the Mexican Envoy, who refused to acknowledge the temporary government of General ZULCAGA, has received dispatches from the Constitutional Government of JUAREZ, approving of his conduct, and requesting him to renew his protest against all conventions concluded by Spain with the Zuloaga Government. M. LAFRAGUA has, in consequence, dispatched a note in this sense to the Mexican representatives in Paris, London, Madrid, and other Courts."

A supplementary credit of sixteen millions had been granted for the War Department.

The Paris correspondent of the London Globe says a rumor was afloat that British diplomacy having exercised some pressure at Madrid, as to measures of Slave-trade repression around the coast of Cuba, Spain has applied to France for support against any compulsory proceeding on the part of British cruisers, and had met encouragement in that quarter.

The Neapolitan Government had made another reduction in the duty on sugar imported in foreign vessels.

Shocks of earthquake continued to be experienced in Naples. Several hurricanes had also occurred, and at Sala fifty houses had been crushed in by falling rocks, while twenty-three persons lost their lives, and several villages were almost destroyed by a deluge of rain.

The English intervention in the Cagliari case is said to have excited great indignation in Southern Italy.

A dispatch in the Advertiser, dated Naples 22, says: "It was reported there that Sardinia intends to persist in making a demand for the payment of an indemnity by the Neapolitan Government to the sufferers by the capture and detention of the Cagliari."

A letter from Berlin states that the Democratic Party has renounced the system of abstention which had been at first determined on, and will take part in the approaching elections. It is believed that if that line of conduct is persisted in, the party in question will return a good number of candidates.

INDIA AND CHINA.

The Calcutta mail of May 18, arrived at Alexandria on the 21st of June.

Shahjehanpore had been relieved by Brigadier JONES. The position was subsequently attacked by NANA SAHIB and KHAN BAHADOOR, but they were repulsed.

Lucknow was threatened in General HOPE GRANT's absence southward by 25,000 men under the Begum

Sir COLIN CAMPBELL had crossed the Ganges. The heat was intense and the troops at Lucknow unhealthy. The garrison was reduced to 2,000 infantry

OMER SINGH had crossed the Ganges, and menaced the Bombay route from Aliyghur. Jugdespore had been occupied by General LUGARD, but on his leaving the place in charge of Col. LIGHTFOOT, the rebels commenced an attack, and the General was moving back to the relief.

A conspiracy had been discovered in a wing of the Fourth Native Infantry in the Punjab. The conspirators were hanged and the wing at once marched to Jullundur.

The Rajah of Shunda, in Nagpore, on the Hyderabad frontier, had broken into open rebellion.

Sundry skirmishes were reported.

The Calcutta import market had slightly improved. Produce continued dull. Money unchanged. Exchange 2s. 1d. for credits, and 2s. 1¼d.@2s. 1¾d. for documents.

Mr. RUSSELL, the special correspondent of the London Times, had recovered from the effects of his sunstroke.

A private letter from India, in the Daily News, says: "People at home are much too sanguine of a speedy termination of the mutiny. We have not force enough to do it. It is obvious that the mutineers have not yet lost heart, and our work is not yet half done."

The dates (telegraphic) from Hong Kong are to May 5.

At Canton, general distrust continued to prevail, and the inhabitants were leaving the city.

Considerable injury had been inflicted on Hong Kong by a water-spout.

Exchange at Hong Hong 4s. 8¾d.

At Shanghae, on the 27th of April, the import markets were inactive. Silks had declined 20 taels. The business done during the month was estimated at 6,000 bales. Exchange 6s. 2d. for credits.

SPIRIT OF THE EUROPEAN PRESS.

Comments on the Slave-Trade.

From the London Times, 21st ult.

Almost all the peculiarities of American politics arise from the position of a vigorous nation which has thought proper to conduct its business, both general and local, by the agency of a weak Government. There is, consequently, a wide field open for administrative abuses, nor is any impediment placed in the way of popular extravagance; but, on the other hand, corrupt and incapable officials have comparatively little power to do harm, and, in the absence of external pressure, temporary passions explode without causing any serious mischief. According to recent accounts the great City of New-Orleans was in the hands of an armed mob, which had imitated the precedent established two or three years ago at San Francisco by superseding the local authorities. A similar proceeding on the Continent of Europe would be the commencement of a revolution, and the news would set armies in motion; but in America newspapers discuss the occurrence as an interesting novelty, which deserves to be censured or approved according to its probable bearing on the interests of parties. The irregular Provisional Government of New-Orleans, after holding its ground for a time, and correcting some of the abuses which have formed the excuse for this movement, has disappeared, and by a compromise, or tacit abdication, the ordinary municipal system is restored. In the case of the Californian Committee of Vigilance, the movement was a protest of the respectable population against a successful body of demagogues; but, whether the disturbance is trifling or serious, such a measure never involves any danger to the general peace of the State or of the Union.

The Federal Government represents the aggregate of many communities which possess the same loose political organization, and it is not surprising that the proceedings of the Administration and of the different representative bodies should bear traces of their origin. The American Senate contains as large a proportion of men of ability as any deliberative body in the world, but on certain occasions all the members seem to rival each other in the rashness and extravagance of their language. It is impossible to suppose that any pretender to the character of a statesman desired to provoke an immediate collision with the English fleet at a point where the American force would have been doubly outnumbered by its adversary; nor is it even likely that the ingenious arguments in favor of a war which would secure a monopoly to native manufacturers produced much impression on the Senate. Unluckily, the orators of Washington have accustomed themselves to indulge to an inexcusable extent in the national weakness of blustering exaggeration. Accordingly the friends of the Administration boasted that orders had been given to repel force by force in a case where it was perfectly known that no force was to be apprehended on the part of the English fleet; but even in America there are degrees of exemption from responsibility, and the Opposition can always afford to outbid the Government in noisy patriotism. Mr. BUCHANAN generally receives the support of the Southern Senators, and the great cotton-producing districts have always a certain regard for the English alliance. It was therefore reserved for the Free-Soil Senators, and especially for the Abolitionists, to reproduce with the most startling effect the famous POGRAM defiance. Better that the sea should swarm with slavers, and that the American flag should be prostituted to piratical purposes, than that the British lion should venture to roar in presence of the American eagle. Dispassionate reasoners on this side the water, who deprecate an unprofitable quarrel in an unjust cause, are naturally denounced by hostile eloquence as partisans of Slavery; but, on the present occasion the champions of the "peculiar institution" are those who have often threatened to dissolve the Union rather than share in the guilt of perpetuating Negro Slavery. Their eloquence has fortunately tended to produce a reaction in the feelings or the language of the rival party. In the technical language of American politics, "The Opposition has bluffed the Government "off the track;" or, in other words, has outdone it in deference to real or supposed popular prejudices; and it now remains for the President and his friends to recover, by the display of temper and statesmanship, the ground which they have lost by their inferiority in the art of vituperation. They have probably done enough to satisfy their Southern supporters that they have no intention whatever of coöperating with the English navy in the active suppression of the Slave-trade, and they are pertectly aware that the SEWARDS and WILSONS are not to be conciliated by any further display of unprovoked zeal in defence of the national flag. It is fair to admit that within its own bounds the Federal Government does not view with entire indifference the violation of the laws against the Slave-trade. The Secretary of the Treasury has recently directed the Collector of Customs at New-York to refuse a clearance to a vessel bound for the coast of Africa, with the avowed purpose of loading, on account of a notorious slave-trading firm, a cargo of negro emigrants. The impudence of the request is easily explained by the desire to take advantage of the clamor against the English squadron in the Gulf of Mexico. The owners of the proposed emigrant vessel have lost one or more ventures by legal captures, and it was hoped that the Government, by supplying them with the necessary papers, would lay a trap for the obnoxious cruisers; but American intrigues are remarkable rather for ingentous audacity than for profound cunning, and Mr. Secretary COBB had no difficulty in understanding the nature of the proposal which he was invited to sanction.

There is reason to suppose that the agitation is beginning to blow over, and that the display of patriotic enthusiasm at Washington has sufficiently served its turn. The newspapers have recently published several contradictions of the rumors which for a considerable period formed the most interesting portion of every successive number, and the certainty that the great majority of the narratives will be found apocryphal can scarcely fail to influence the language of the Government. It is fortunate that the English Parliament has wholly abstained from an undignified imitation of noisy and vulgar challenges proceeding from irritation. The conversations which have taken place in both Houses prove that all statesmen are agreed, not only as to the rule of internatonal law, but as to the necessity of keeping within its limits. General CASS' principle is in no degree opposed to the doctrine which was long since laid down by Lord ABERDEEN, and both statesmen would adopt the interpretation of the law which has been repeatedly laid down in our own columns. In time of peace there is no right either of search or of visitation, unless it has been conceded by express treaty; but in suspicious cases cruisers may, at their own risk, satisfy themselves of the nationality of a vessel bearing the American flag. The United States ask for no privilege in favor of foreign ships which unlawfully assume their national colors; and, on the other hand, the English Government disclaims all intention of interfering with American vessels. When mistakes are committed the injured party is entitled to redress, and if they are made repeatedly, a presumption arises that they must have been caused by an erroneous system of excessive activity. It is agreed on all hands that an English man-of-war may seize a Spanish slaver, although every mast is decked out with the stars and stripes; and it is equally certain that an American trader may load a cargo of slaves with impunity in full view of the whole English squadron. Where there is no dispute as to the legal doctrine, a practical collision can only be occasioned by extreme awkwardness on the one side, or by willful animosity on the other. It is true that a cause of offence still remains in the presence of an English force, exercising a watch over the coast of Cuba; but the President's Government is in some degree responsible for the measure, and Mr. FITZGERALD has informed the House of Commons that the English Ministers have prudently resolved to send the squadron back to the Coast of Africa. It would have been better that the concession should never have become necessary, but it is wiser to repair a mistake than to persevere in it. A gentleman who has exercised the right of shooting on his own outlying field, in the immediate vicinity of his neighbor's best preserve, cannot renounce his undoubted right when he finds that a coldness has arisen; but, if he is a prudent and moderate man, he will, on a future occasion, choose his beat in a different direction.

From the London Times, 25th ult.

The true policy, if you would compete with Cuba Slavery, is not to seek for grievances and make complaints that the colored races of mankind are subject to the common lot of laboring humanity, but to people the islands of the torrid zone with Asiatics and Africans laboring in freedom. Instead of crying—"Stop the transport of laborers," the cry of the philanthropist should be—Strain every nerve to increase that transport and to render it effective. Do not create impediments and call them regulations; do not regard with hostility the efforts of the colored races to compete in freedom with their compatriots in Slavery; do not invent opprobrious nicknames for conditions of labor which are more easy than those proposed to your soldiers, and less enduring than those imposed upon your own middle class countrymen proceeding to India. Work with the men who have a pecuniary interest in putting down Slavery; aid them in competing with the Spaniards and Americans, who buy, and sell, and traffic in mankind; be reasonable enough to admit that a Chinaman or a Hindoo must be pressed by the same necessities to labor which coerce your own white countrymen; and acknowledge that the lot, even of an African, cannot be too luxuriate in a paradise of unearned plenty. Fence them round with all necessary securities against the cupidity of bad men; give them greater securities than you gave to the Irish when they crowded your unhealthy ships, fleeing from famine; but do not wall up this stream of hungry emigrants, do not kill these black men with your ill-judged kindness, or sacrifice a great imperial interest to a false and maudlin sentiment. Mere vituperative declamation is an easy, a popular, and an useless thing; instead of this, men who would be useful to their kind should help us in council and should aid us to discover how that which must be done may be well and safely done.

From the Daily News, 22d ult.

Whenever there has been any rising mist reeking from this topic of human guilt and woe, and chilling our alliances with the United States, it has been the most natural question—"Why do we not make a plain inquiry of the American Government in such a way as to obtain an answer; and in such a mode as would gratify them on a point on which they are apt, from their peculiar position, to feel sore? Why do we not proceed upon their great constitutional provision, by which the Slave-trade was declared piracy after 1808; and on their repeated subsequent avowals to the same effect, and inquire what in their opinion, is the best method of getting their constitutional enactments obeyed?" What can be so straightforward a way of negotiating as to say: "You denounce the Slave-trade as we do; and your laws treat it as ours do. By occasional proceedings in your Atlantic ports, when the Federal authority detects and punishes the traffic in native Africans, we observe that you have difficulty in getting your laws obeyed, while there are slave markets in the country. What have you to propose in the way of remedy? What can we do, as allies, in the furtherance of our common object? We ourselves are not wedded to any particular method of treating the evil. Show us a better, and we will cordially join you in it."

If such an appeal has been made once and again, and without success, we, the people of England, ought to have known the fact, and the nature of the difficulty. If the appeal now made is the first of its kind, the fact is strange, and not very creditable to our statesmen. If it is not new, we ought to have been informed why it has failed—whether American statesmen have evaded the responsibility of proposing a scheme, or could not enforce their authority in regard to American slavers, or could not agree with other Powers as to the terms and execution of treaties. But we seem to have reached a point which will serve admirably for a fresh start.

We now learn that the plan of blockading the coasts of Cuba instead of those of Africa, is an American suggestion: that both parties to the negotiation find the scheme full of perils and difficulties; and that they are actually discussing a new plan of maritime police, especially directed against the Slave trade. We are assured that there is every reason to hope that a clear understanding and agreement will be arrived at, so that the two powers may work together, amicably and effectually. It seems rather strange that, while such a course is not only practicable, but in actual progress, there should be any appearance of hostility between the two Governments—any agitation at Washington to put new and unheard-of powers into the hands of the President. The "sound and fury" thus are not only "signifying nothing," but are totally irrelevant to the case. They will the sooner subside, it is true; but it will be a question for history how, under such circumstances, they could arise. The obvious practical consideration for us is this—that what has happened now may possibly occur again. There may be wrath and agitation against us which we may consider causeless. The thing to be done, then as now, is to say to our Ally, "Your object is the same as ours. What method can you suggest for accomplishing it?" When two parties are engaged in a consultation how best to achieve a good purpose in which they agree, they are about the last people in the world likely to go to war with each other.

From the Morning Star, 22d ult.

There are hardly two opinions in this country as to the duty of our Government, not only to disavow any acts of violence committed by our cruisers upon American ships in the Cuban waters, if it can be proved that the alleged facts are correctly stated, but to withdraw altogether from that claim to the right of search which neither America, nor any other great maritime power, can be brought to recognize and admit. The maintenance of this right has long been nothing but the assertion of a barren principle, which we have attempted to enforce, and which everybody knows never can be enforced without the certainty of a war with the United States. It is no doubt true, as Lord MALMESBURY lately remarked, that if all restrictions on the use of the American flag are removed, every pirate and slaver on the face of the sea will carry on their nefarious trades under cover of its protection. How far it will be honorable to a Christian State to become the patron of all the scum and scoundrelism floating upon the ocean, it is for the people of that State to determine. We would fain hope that our brethren on the other side of the Atlantic would not long tolerate so infamous a prostitution of their national flag. But in any case America must be left to protect her own morals and reputation. Mr. GLADSTONE, when speaking on this very question of the Slave-trade in 1850, laid down a maxim, to which we think all countries, and especially our own, will do well to give heed. "It is not," said the right honorable gentleman, "the ordinance of Providence that the Government of one nation should correct the morals of another."

But we advert now to this difference that has arisen between us and America for another purpose. We are sometimes charged with being severe censors of our country. We feel bound, therefore, to say that, as it appears to us, nothing could be more temperate and dignified than the spirit displayed, both in Parliament and by the Press, in the discussion of this whole question. There has been no blustering or bombast; no disposition to retort the hectoring effusions in which some of the American journals have seen fit to indulge. On all hands, there has been a generous readiness to admit that if the facts relating to the collisions that have taken place in the Cuban waters are correctly reported, the Government of the United States has a just ground for complaint, and that immediate redress should be accorded to its demands. We, in this country, have not been deterred from making these frank admissions, by that most common form of cowardice masking itself under the guise of courage, the fear of being thought afraid. To our minds, if we only acted always towards other nations as we have acted in this instance towards our American kinsmen, it would leave nothing to desire in our conduct as a great nation.

But if we compare all this with what has taken place on the other side of the water, the contrast is not creditable to our Republican brethren. We do not allude here to the tone assumed by the most violent of their newspapers and stump orators. No man in his senses would dream of paying the least attention to the preposterous ravings of such a paper as the New-York Herald, which has been making it as clear as a bottle of ink, to the people of the United States, that "a war with England, or even with England and France," would be a source of unparalleled prosperity and greatness, political and commercial, to their country. There is a Welsh proverb which says, "Let the magpie chatter, it is not worth shooting."

But what shall we say to the deplorable exhibition that took place in the Senate when the Committee of Foreign Relations brought up its report in respect of what is called "British outrages?" We do not complain that that report was strongly worded, or that its demands for instant cessation of the alleged outrages, and for a conclusive adjustment of the disputed question of international law, out of which they had sprung, were temporary and emphatic. But how shall we characterise the conduct of the leading Anti-Slavery Senators, who, not satisfied with the severity of the report, and of the resolutions founded thereon, got up, one after another, to make speeches and proposals exceeding in violence and extravagance anything that the most rabid Southern orators dared to propose?

From the London Times.

The Constitutionnel publishes an article on the difficulties which have arisen between the Governments of Great Britain and the United States on the subject of the search exercised by some English cruisers on American merchant vessels. The Constitutionnel observes that the present difference has given rise to a remark which never before so forcibly struck public opinion, which is, that whenever any difference arises between these two Powers, one gives proof of the most perfect moderation, and a condescension which is not habitual to it, while the other, on the contrary, affects a susceptibility and becomes exacting to a degree not justified by success. The Constitutionnel explains this fact by showing that although the United States have developed their strength, and are increasing in a proportion hitherto unknown the extent of their territory, the British nation is by no means intimidated, nor does she fear their army nor their fleet. The length of time the Government of the United States has been reducing the Mormons to submission is not calculated to give a grand idea of its military strength. The American navy appears large on paper, because the steamboats which convey passengers on the lakes and rivers are included in the effective force; but, in case of war, Great Britain would have an immense superiority. The English Government is conciliatory, because the United States supply the English manufacturers with cotton, which article provides employment for so large a proportion of the English people. But, as the Constitutionnel truly remarks, if the English people have need to purchase cotton, the Americans feel an equal necessity to find purchasers. So that, although the English Government is ever ready to make sacrifices for the maintenance of peace, the American people would suffer most by a war between the two countries. War would not deprive England of cotton, for the American planters would send their produce to Havre, Antwerp, Rotterdam, and all the Northern ports. They would send their cotton into English ports in neutral bottoms, and the Americans would draw their spun cotton from England by a similar conveyance. The only inconvenience to England would be that the intervention of a third party between the buyer and seller would increase the price of the cotton to the English manufacturer, and the Americans would probably try every expedient, and might finally succeed, in manufacturing the raw material at home. The Constitutionnel concludes thus:

"The manufacture of cotton is for England the occupation and the life of 1,000,000 or 2,000,000 inhabitants. It feeds entire provinces. During the late crisis on that side of the Channel thousands of operatives were supported by public charity. What, then, would be the consequence when those cotton manufacturers who work five days out of six to clothe foreigners should lose that market? Who can tell what might happen? It is then that England might see a terrible revolution break out at home. The cotton question would be converted into a social question. It is the sentiment on that situation which renders England so prudent and so moderate with regard to the United States, and which, on the other hand, inspires the United States with an assurance which, in case of necessity, she might carry to a degree of temerity."

From the London Shipping Gazette, June 24.

It is impossible to deny that in this very able paper the American Secretary of the Treasury has given a masterly exposition of the state of the law, as it regards the importation of Africans, and has shown that any such importation is a violation of the law of Congress no less than of the law of the slave-holding States. It is also very intelligible that the United States' Government should avail itself of the opportunity afforded by the application of Messrs. LAFITTE to repudiate those charges to which the notorious connection of Mr. BUCHANAN's Government with the Slave Interest has rendered that Government liable. We may also observe, that the existence of a law and its administration are two very different things. Mr. COBB has himself demonstrated that the importation of negroes, bond or free, is a direct violation of the law of the Union; it follows, therefore, that to charter and equip slavers in American ports is also a violation of that law. But it is notorious that the ports of the Union, and especially the Northern ports, do send out numbers of these vessels from time to time. What becomes of their cargoes? Are they all destined for Cuba? Perhaps so. The slave population of the United States amounts at present to about 3,300,000. The fact that the slave-breeding States do not supply the natural deficit in this population is attested by the fact that the slave is rising from year to year in value. It must be admitted that the temptation to import Africans into the Southern States is becoming stronger every day. The Southerners may be superior to any such temptation. The Secretary to the Treasury has demonstrated that to import Africans is contrary to American law. We trust, for the sake of consistancy, if from no higher motive, the American Government will show as commendable a determination to prevent slavers fitting out in the Northern ports as they have to prevent the egress of vessels from Southern ports chartered for cargoes of free Africans.

M. Felix Belly and his Grant.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times writes, June 23:

"Permit me to add a few words respecting the convention lately signed between the Costa Rican and Nicaraguan States on the one hand, and M. FELIX BELLY, on behalf of M. MILLAUD & Co., of Paris, on the other. To what account the French Government may hereafter turn this transaction, or what political consequences may ensue at some period more or less remote, I do not pretend to say, but I have, I may say, excellent authority for affirming that, so far as M. BELLY is concerned, he is not the official or the unofficial agent of the French Government. He is simply, as he has professed to be, the representative of a mercantile house desirous of taking advantage of the concession, just as it would of any other enterprise that promised well. The confidential instructions given to M. BELLY by the only employers he has to do with directly—namely, MILLAUD & Co.—were, that he should not only not put himself forward as having any mission from the French Government, but that he should disabuse the Nicaraguans and Costa Ricans if they recognized him in that capacity. The position of a negotiator was new to him, and though he might, and probably did, repudiate any diplomatic character, yet the citizens of those towns seemed as unwilling to believe his denials as were the burghers of Liege not to regard QUENTIN DURWARD as the secret emissary of LOUIS XI. on his arrival with the ladies of Croye in that fair city. Whether there be any understanding between the French Government and the Millaud Company, I cannot say—I am assured there is not; but, so far as M. BELLY is concerned, I think I am safe in affirming that he knows no one except that company. That the Government, or even the Emperor, has been regularly informed of the negotiations for the concession of an enterprise of which it was, so far back as 1845, proposed to make him the director, is possible; but I have reason to believe that the Resident Minister in Paris of these two States has not yet had an audience of his Majesty on the subject.

Another point I think it right to advert to. It has been declared by the persons who are at the head of the Company, and is still declared by them, that the whole project will be abandoned unless they have the full coöperation of the American and English capitalists; that they are resolved to do nothing alone; and that the first object is to have the neutrality of the canal maintained under the protection of France, England and the United States. The contract with the New-York Company was, as I have already mentioned, to be null and void if the conditions involved in it were not fulfilled before the close of the present month, and it is with a view to ascertain the intentions of that Company, or urge the combining its action with the French and English, that M. BELLY has set out for New-York, where he now is, and whence he will probably proceed to London."

Dr. Kane's Arctic Discoveries.

At the last meeting, in London, of the Royal Geographical Society, the President (Sir RODERICK MURCHISON) introduced to the meeting Mr. POOR, of America, who, in company with another gentleman, formed a deputation from the Geographical Society, of New-York, furnished with introductions from the President and Secretary of that learned body. The object of the deputation was to seek an explanation respecting the correctness of the following paragraph, which had lately appeared in Wilmer and Smith's European Times: "At a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, Dr. RINK, a Dane, read a paper in which he challenged the accuracy of nearly all the alleged discoveries of Dr. KANE on the north coast of Greenland. The lecturer maintained that the line of coast on the American coast of Baffin Bay, as high as 81° latitude, sketched in Dr. KANE's chart, was fictitious, and was founded on observations reported to have been made from points where it was impossible to have seen the land. Many other portions of Dr. KANE's narrative were disputed, and it was roundly asserted that the American was hoaxed by his steward. These views were indorsed by Sir GEORGE BACK, Captain COLLINSON, and Dr. ARMSTRONG. Sir RODERICK MURCHISON was in the chair, but he said nothing on the disputed question." The American Geographical Society, in consequence of the above paragraph, and feeling naturally a deep interest in maintaining the truthful character and scientific reputation of Dr. KANE, requested to have a copy of Dr. RINK's paper, together with the observations of those who spoke on the occasion, which the Chairman stated the Secretary would be happy to furnish; but he begged most emphatically to declare that the account from the European Times was inaccurate, and he regretted that so garbled a statement should have appeared. The true account of the proceedings of that meeting, which was inserted in the Times, was to the effect that Dr. RINK, who commenced by paying the highest tribute of respect to KANE's memory, after reviewing the speculations of that undaunted traveler with regard to the physical geography of Greenland, referred to the question of the "open Polar Sea," supposed to exist, which had been discovered by MORTON, the steward, and the Greenlander HANS, and threw great doubt upon the accuracy of their statements and up

JUDGE CULVER AND THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH OF WILLIAMSBURG.

His Review of the Action of the Church Majority and Refutation of the Charges Preferred Against Him.

HE IS VINDICATED BY A MUTUAL COUNCIL.

The Mutual Council called by ERASTUS D. CULVER, City Judge of Brooklyn, to review the ex parte proceedings of the First Baptist Church in Williamsburg, of which he is, or rather was, a member,—having been expelled from membership in that association on certain charges which have already become notorious,—met Wednesday afternoon at Trenor's Academy in South Eighth-street, near Fourth, Williamsburg. Among those present in response to the invitation addressed to different churches were EX-Governor (now Judge) BRIGGS, of Massachusetts; Gov. FLETCHER, of Vermont; Judge BAKER, of Buffalo; Rev. Mr. HISCOX, of New-York; several other clergymen from this and the sister cities, and a large number of ladies, among whom were Mrs. MARY C. BROWN and Mrs. HINCK, the females with whom the alleged improprieties charged on the Judge were committed. The Judge's wife and daughter occupied one of the front seats.

During the address of Judge CULVER, Mrs. BROWN wept copiously, and was at last obliged to retire to one of the back windows for air. She is a respectable-looking woman, of say 45 years, at least, of sober carriage, and not especially attractive in feature though certainly not remarkably homely. The Judge himself was at times very much affected, and on one occasion even was obliged to pause for several minutes so as to permit his emotion to pass over. The ladies exhibited much sympathy with his distress and failed to repress their tears.

Shortly after 2 o'clock, Judge BAKER, of Buffalo, rose and moved that Gov. BRIGGS, of Massachusetts, be appointed temporarily to the chair, in order that the number of Churches represented might be ascertained, and that the Council might be properly organized; carried unanimously. The Rev. Mr. REMINGTON was chosen Secretary.

The Churches to whom invitations were sent, were then called, and were found to be represented as follows:

Stanton street Church, New-York—The Rev. Dr. E. T. HISCOX J. F. ZEBLEY.
North Berian, N. Y.—The Rev. D. DUNBAR.
Tabernacle—None.
Bedford avenue—The Rev. S. REMINGTON and J. W. FLYNN, Esq.
Mission Church, E. D.—MARK HULL.
First Baptist Church, Poughkeepsie—The Rev. H. A. GUILD.
Central Baptist Church, Poughkeepsie—Deacon WM. WEST.
Nyack—The Rev. JOHN P. BURR.
First Albany, Albany—WM. RICHARDSON.
Pearl-street Albany—None.
Niagara-square, Buffalo—Judge A. L. BAKER.
Pittsfield, Mass—Jucge G. N. BRIGGS
Danbury, Conn—The Rev. L. D. GOWAN, THOS. J. VAN ZANDT.
Norwalk, Conn.—None.
Bottskill, N. Y.—CALVIN FENTON.
Whitehall, N. Y.—W. W. COOK.
Cambridge, N. Y—None
Cavendish, Vt.—Governor RYLAND FLETCHER.

This made in all 17 delegates representing 14 out of the 16 churches addressed.

The Council then proceeded to a permanent organization, Gov. FLETCHER, of Vermont, being chosen President, and Rev. Mr. REMINGTON Secretary.

On the suggestion of Judge CULVER as to the propriety of appointing an assistant Clerk, Brother BAKER, of Buffalo, was unanimously elected to that office.

Prayer was then offered by the Rev. Mr. DUNBAR, of New-York.

On the suggestion of Judge BRIGGS, Judge CULVER read the letter he had addressed to the churches asking a mutual council on the ground of his feeling aggrieved by the action and decision of the First Baptist Church of Williamsburg. Appended to this was a communication signed by 61 protesting members of the same church virtually concurring in Judge CULVER's invitation. The Rev. Dr. HISCOX then moved that Church members present, but not in pursuance of the invitation, be invited to join in the deliberations of the Council, but without the right to vote. Carried.

A country member moved that the same privilege be extended to the Sisters present. Carried, nem. con.

Judge BAKER asked whether the Church to which Judge CULVER belonged had been invited also?

Judge CULVER read a communication which he had addressed to the Church, asking that the Clerk might be directed to furnish copies of all the proceedings in his case and that of Mrs. BROWN, together with a copy of the report submitted to the Church and all the evidence. The original of this communication was presented to the Church on the 22d June, 1858, and motion was made that the request be granted, which was refused.

At the same time he sent them another communication (which he read) inviting the Church to be present by a Committee at the meeting of the council to vindicate and sustain their action in the premises, which was also refused.

The Judge, not having a copy of the record, was unable to give documentary proof of the truth of these statements as to the rejection of his requests and invitations, but called on Brother ALLEN, one of the members, who was present at the Church meeting at which these requests were made, to state whether he represented the facts correctly.

Brother ALLEN indorsed his statements in every particular, and further affirmed that Judge CULVER informed them that he would call a council, of which he gave them due notice.

Governor BRIGGS moved that the Chairman extend the invitation to the pastor and officers of the Church and such members of the majority as were now present, asking them to take such part in the proceedings and deliberations as their judgment and sense of duty should dictate.

The motion was seconded and carried unanimously.

Judge CULVER proceeded to say it had been asserted that the reason why the Church had withheld the record was the fear of a prosecution for libel, for, although he had called for it, yet there were others implicated who, if the record were given up to him, might enter a libel suit on the ground that they had not joined in that call. To meet that contingency, he procured and sent to the Church a request for the record, signed by all the parties implicated in it and in the report of the Committee.

That the Church also refused, on the new ground that all the persons making that application were not members of the Church. The motion was made at a Church meeting to grant the request, and the Church refused.

Brother WELLS, being appealed to, confirmed this statement, and added that he had been insulted by one of the members, and called disorderly by the Pastor for presenting the motion.

Judge CULVER then said that if the Council deemed they had jurisdiction in the matter, he was ready to present the case in the best form he could, under the circumstances.

The CHAIRMAN—No objection being offered, you will proceed, Sir.

Judge CULVER—If the Moderator please, we have called this Council to review the action of the Church to which we belonged as members—not to review it directly as a Court of Appeal, but to review it in the light of advice from the sister Churches. We are asking you to review the action of the Church in its Church capacity for we feel aggrieved by that action, and, in order to present it in as clear a shape as possible, I have endeavored to condense the case to the utmost of my power. Bearing in mind that I am the accused party, and was so before the Church, and that neither I nor this sister, a poor widow woman, who had no one to represent her, were allowed by the Church to meet our accusers, face to face, when they were being examined against us, and question them in our own behalf, it is very embarrassing to me to present the case to you, for I have all the way through to speak in relation to myself, and nothing can be more true than that the man who pleads his own case has a fool for his client. We complain that this Church has acted in a way that has been irregular in the procedure, wrong on the merits, and dictated by causes and motives that cannot be approved. First, as to the course of procedure. The first notice I ever had from the Church in an official capacity, was a letter received 19th January, 1858, written by Mr. JOHN WESTERVELT, and stating that he and Mr. J. A. STORY, having been appointed by the deacons of the First Baptist Church to investigate the charges made by one of the members against me, they wished an interview with me, and proposed that I should meet them on the following Thursday at 7½ o'clock.

To that letter, the Judge continued, he sent a reply the same day, stating he knew no reason why that evening would not answer as well as any other,—and requested, in the meantime, to be furnished with a written copy of the charges, the names of the members making them, and the witnesses supporting them, as soon as Wednesday evening—(the letter being written on Tuesday.)

Next day—viz. on the 20th—he received another letter, signed by Deacons WESTERVELT and STORY, saying that they could not find anything in their rules of order or discipline requiring them to furnish him with a copy of the charges against him, the names of the members making them, and of witnesses supporting them; and stating further, that, as members of the Church, they must decline having any other person present. Not knowing exactly what they meant about having nobody but church members present, he took with him Brother WEST, a member of the Church, as a friend and adviser, and Brother MOORE, another member, and who was, in his estimation, an important witness in regard to what he supposed to be the charges against him. No sooner did they make their appearance before the Committee than these brethren were each requested immediately to leave; their presence would not be tolerated for an instant. He then presented to the Committee the following preliminary objections:

1. He excepts to the manner of appointing the Committee, that the Deacons have no such authority.

2. He excepts to the refusal of the Committee to furnish him with copy of the charges, name of complainant and witnesses.

3. He objects that the Gospel steps have not been taken in the matter; that the member making the charges not having first seen, informed, or labored with, the alleged offender.

Subject to the foregoing preliminary objections, he then asks of said WESTERVELT and STORY:

1. A copy of the vote, or resolution, appointing them such Committee.

2. He renews his request for a copy of the specific charges, the name of the member making them, and the authority on which they are made.

3. He objects to the admission or use of any hearsay evidence, or any testimony, in the taking of which he has not had an opportunity to participate.

On that no action whatever was taken; there was not even a motion made in regard to it. He then asked the Committee for the substance of their charges. Of what transpired subsequent to that he could offer no other evidence to the Council save the minutes he had taken at the time. (These minutes he read.) It appeared from them that the charge was said to be that he had visited houses at improper hours, to wit, Mrs. BROWN's, in South Third-street, and Mrs. HINCK's, in South Sixth-street. Then he called upon the Committee to know what the circumstances were; they said they did not want them then to be known. As to Mrs. HINCK, he utterly denied to them that he was ever in her house more than three or four times when she lived in South Sixth-street, and then only on legal affairs of hers which he then had in charge, and that he never was in her house at so late an hour as was alleged against him. Having denied the charge, he renewed his call for the proofs and the names of the witnesses. In relation to the other lady, the general charge was that he had visited her at a late and improper hour. There was no evidence furnished and no name given. All that was said was that a certain Judge, not named, was seen to go out of her house at a late hour. Having again called for the proof and the names of the witnesses, he left. Mr. WESTERVELT said to him at that time there would be no further action in the matter until he notified them. There was no further action taken in the matter until the church meeting of the 25th of January. As he could get no copy of the charges or the names of witnesses through this course, and as the city was filled with rumors, he felt it his duty to go to the church meeting, and, in order that there might be no mistake about it, he submitted a written request that a Committee be appointed by the Church to investigate the charges, and report thereon to the Church; and that such Committee be directly under the authority of the Church, and that they be required to notify the accused of the time of taking any testimony; and that he be permitted to be present and examine the witnesses; and that he be furnished beforehand with a copy of the charges against him. In connection with that he read the record of the Church, which he had obtained through the intervention of a Court of law. The first entry represented him as making a speech of half an hour's duration, wherein he threatened the deacons with a prosecution. That was changed, and in its stead was one representing him as presenting to the Church, with the request that it might be placed upon file, a written protest against the action of the deacons, which, on motion, was laid on the table. The Church approved of that record, although the fact was that he entered no protest against the action of the two deacons. When that was laid on the table he handed another request to the effect that, as the committee had declined to give him the names of the witnesses, he respectfully asked to be furnished with their names, to be allowed to cross-examine them, and to produce counter testimony. That he regarded as a matter of right, and even craved as a favor. It was not granted. One of the deacons, prepared for the occasion, sprung an adjournment to cut it off. The moderator said the motion to adjourn had precedence of all others. He (the Judge) declared that he would regard the adjournment as a negative on his request, and in that way it was killed off. When they came to take up their record for the next month there was not a word found in it in relation to this last request. Matters remained in that way from the 20th of January to the 15th of February. On that day, about 7½ in the evening, he found a letter from Mr. WESTERVELT tucked under his door, requesting to see him at his (Mr. W.'s) house at 7 o'clock in the hope that they might arrive at some satisfactory arrangement as to the witnesses in the case. He went and saw Mr. STORY and Mr. WESTERVELT, who wanted him to go with them up town but would not name any person or place, to hear evidence as to the charges in relation to Mrs. BROWN. He said it was impossible to go that evening as he had an engagement at the meeting of the Industrial School and was going to Albany next morning on a fixed engagement, but wanted them to appoint some other evening. In that conversation he requested them to allow a Commissioner to be present to take the testimony; they refused, but said he might bring brother VALENTINE with him. It was then agreed that the matter should stand over till Friday evening, after his return from Albany, when Mrs. BROWN was also to have the right to be present at the examination. After his return from Albany, he found a letter from brother WESTERVELT, dated Feb. 18, in which he stated that he had seen the witnesses, and laid his (Judge C.'s) proposal before them to meet at his (Mr. W.'s) house, and they refused to come, unless he met the terms on which they had agreed when he last saw them (the Committee.) Here occurred a transaction, which he was sorry to allude to, but he must, as it was part of the narrative. On the 19th of February he called at Mr. WESTERVELT's house after sundown. Mr. WESTERVELT came to the door. He (the Judge) asked if the Committee were goingt to take that testimony to-night, as they had proposed Mr. WESTERVELT said: "No, the witnesses don't expect us; they won't comply with your terms." "What terms?" he asked. "Why, taking it down, and signing and swearing to it," was the reply. "Well," said he, (the Judge) "we shall go and take down the statement, and ask them to sign it, and swear to it, and if they don't, it is not my fault." "No," said WESTERVELT, "there is no appointment if you do not comply with the terms agreed on, we cannot go." "What are your terms?" asked he, (Judge C.) "Well," said Mr. WESTERVELT, "to go up and talk the matter over, and if you can explain and clear it up, so much the better." He (Judge C.) then said: "You will drive me at last into taking the witnesses and you into a law suit; your conduct is niggardly and tyrannical." WESTERVELT said, "I won't be insulted in my own house," and slammed the door in his (Judge C.'s) face. The Judge then went to his office and wrote to the Committee, stating that whenever any statement or testimony was to be taken in reference to his case, he should insist on the right of having such friend or friends in the Church as he might think proper, on having the statements of the witnesses taken down in writing, and that the witnesses should be asked to sign them, and in the event of their refusal, that the testimony should be taken subject to that exception. Having heard that one of the persons who said something against him was Mr. DYKEMAN, he (the Judge) was desirous of seeing him. On the 22d, which was the following Monday, he met a man whom he did not ever know before, but whom he thought from his grave looks to be Mr. ROBERT DYKEMAN. He asked him, and he said he was Mr. ROBERT DYKEMAN, and added: "Judge, I do not know anything against you, in the world, myself." He (the Judge) asked him if he might go and see his wife in his presence? At first he seemed reasonable, but at length refused. Then he asked him if he would consent that evening that BROWN should go up, and that he (Judge C.) should go and hear the statement? He (DYKEMAN) said he would. He had heard, then, through a friend of Mrs. BROWN, that on Saturday night the Committee had called on her and told her that on Monday night they would call for her, and she should go with them to hear some witnesses, but they would not tell who or where it was; she was then told by the Committee that she could be present and take along a friend; but that the accused (meaning Judge C.) could not be present. On Monday night, accordingly, he went to DYKEMAN's; one of the Committee objected, but not very strongly, and he (Judge C.) went in, being there by permission of the man of the house against the interdiction of the Committee. They heard the statements there made; what they were he would give afterwards.

On the 23d of February a church meeting was held, at which this Committee, who had given him no opportunity of hearing any testimony, or presenting any, made their report to the Church. The first draft was made by the Clerk, but either Brother STORY or Dr BAKER drafted a stronger one, and it stood recorded "that Judge CULVER had been in the habit of paying, and MARY C. BROWN of receiving, visits at untimely hours."

There stood the fact recorded against him. They had gone and interwoven with the record a meeting, said to have taken place by the deacons more than two months before, which was assembled without authority of the Church, and without his having had any opportunity of a trial. The Church refused to amend that record. On the 23d of February this other Committee was appointed to go on and investigate the charges; and here he came to another branch of the subject. He had now got a Committee specifically appointed to investigate the charge against him of paying and against Mrs. BROWN for receiving visits at untimely hours. On that Committee the Moderator, to do him justice, appointed Mr. WELLS, a friend of the accused. He (the Judge) sent them a letter asking them to give him two days' notice of their meetings, to complete their evidence before requiring him to put in his, stating that he should give them similar notice, and requesting that no testimony be taken on either side in the absence of the other party. To that the Chairman responded, answering no specific query, simply stating that they meant to conduct the investigation in their own way, but would afford the accused every opportunity of exculpating himself. In direct contradiction to that promise they went on to take evidence behind his back and without giving him any notice, whereupon brother WELLS stated to the Committee and the Church that it was not right, and if they continued it he would resign. They did continue it, and he resigned. On the 23d of March the record was read, declaring that Judge CULVER had been found guilty. Every effort had been made to injure his case by arraigning him as against the pastor, by introducing topics in relation to his (Judge C.'s) views of a sermon by Dr. BAKER on Slavery. One of the members said, "Oh, Brother CULVER talks about Slavery, but when did you ever him pray for the Slave?" To which he replied, "You never asked me to pray, and if you did, what would be the use, when you know I would not pray as you wanted me to!" The Church approved of this record. Brother WELLS protested against it. He (Judge C.) asked for a copy of it. They refused it, and would not hear him. Next morning the sun was not an hour above the tops of the mountains before he sued out a writ from the Supreme Court, obtained the records, and had them copied. Afterwards, in reply to a letter from him, the Committee wrote to say that they would give him an opportunity of seeing such witnesses as would not object to meeting him. They sent a similar letter to Mrs. BROWN, but refused to let her bring any friend with her. In his reply to this letter he suggested that, as a matter of caution, the Committee had better provide themselves with a pair of blinders as a hoodwink, and wadding to stuff his ears, lest the voices of the witnesses should be heard. When Brother KNIGHT, the Chairman, read this, he flew into a passion, declared he would not be insulted and refused to accompany them. He (the Judge) asked the brother how he had been insulted. The brother misread the passage, "Lest the voice of your witnesses should be heard," as if written "Lest the voice of your mistresses should be heard"—which was received with a burst of laughter from the rest of the Committee. They then went to DYCKMAN's, and got there a little after 8 o'clock. They found the house quite dark. They rapped; after some time Mrs. DYCKMAN put her head out of the second story window. She said they could not get in as all the family had gone to bed. She was asked when she could see her visitors, and at last agreed to name Saturday evening. She held a conversation with him. (Judge C.,) she told him that she would see her son ASA, who was also a witness in the case, and have him there on Saturday. Just as they were going away, she said: "This is the Baptist Committee, I suppose." "Yes," said he; "Mrs. DYCKMAN, don't you know who it is that is talking to you?" (The council would bear in mind that this was the woman who knew his voice through a brick wall and down a long passage way on a winter night.) "Don't you know who is talking to you?" he said. "No," said she, "I don't." "Don't you know whose voice it is?" he asked. "No," was the reply. "Why," said he, "it is Judge CULVER's!" She hauled in her head quicker than ever any mud-turtle did. On Saturday night, after getting through with his Court business, and taking a hasty cup of tea, he hurried up to Mrs. DYCKMAN's, according to appointment, but met the Committeee on their way back, and were told by them that she said she would never see them. There that matter broke off. On the 7th of May he wrote to the Committee asking whether they were through and had taken all the testimony in his presence which they expected to take; and, if so, asking for a copy of the testimony, and stating that he had some twenty or twenty-five witnesses to examine in his defence. To this the Chairman replied, that so far as their duties extended in the matter, they were satisfied, unless something else should come to their knowledge of which they were now ignorant, that they would be ready at any time that might be agreed upon to present their report to the Church; that as to going to see or hear twenty or twenty-five witnesses they would do no such thing; that they felt perfectly justified in taking the course they had, leaving it to others to decide whether it was legal, ecclesiastical, or in conformity with Baptist usages; that they would not furnish a copy of the testimony taken behind the back of the accused, and that all further correspondence with him was closed. He (Judge C.) wrote another letter asking specifically for a copy of the report; that was never acknowledged. Now, we had traveled down almost to the time when this report was made. That was on the 3d of June. He applied to the previous meeting in very respectful terms for a copy of the testimony. Deacon MCCUTCHEON got up and begged the brethren to be cautious. Judge CULVER looked very bland, but there was harm concealed behind it; as to this request, he would rather be inclined himself, indeed he thought it would be as well, to let Judge CULVER get a copy of the testimony. He had hardly made that careful and guarded suggestion, when there came from the Chair a frown that withered even McCUTCHEON down, "Let the Committee make their report; it comes in that way." He had hardly got the words out of his mouth before the man Friday, over the way, got up and moved an adjournment. That man's name was WM. B. HURD, a dentist of their city, whom he (the Judge) afterwards told that if he would emigrate to the borders of Missouri, he would pay the expenses of his transportation. The motion to adjourn was carried, and the meeting was adjourned, as the Moderator declared, with benediction.

We now come down to the last meeting—the exclusion meeting—on the 3d of June. He spoke of it with great regret; it was the most strange exhibition he ever saw in his life. As the meeting opened, and just before the reading of the report was commenced, he desired to preserve his rights on one matter, and that was a preliminary one. He rose and stated that the objection he rose to make was but preliminary, and would take but a moment. He objected, then, first, to any ex parte evidence; second, to any evidence that was mere hearsay; third, to any testimony not in writing, unless given by a member of that Church, or of some Church of the same faith and order. When he rose, he had only made the first objection when he was met by a call to order, and the Chair put him down. He insisted then that he should be allowed to state his objections and started to name his second objection, when he was again called to order. He objected when the report was about to be offered, but was ruled down and ordered to take his seat three or four times. He would admit he was not as obedient as some would be. At last they resorted to the usual argument—an argument, he was sorry to say, sometimes used in Churches—the argument of the heels. They stamped him down. His objections were not noticed. The report was read by the Chairman. He followed it by a speech, and that speech by a motion to exclude Judge CULVER, and withdraw from him the hand of fellowship. He (Judge CULVER) said to the brethren he wanted time to see the report. It was refused. Then several motions were made, and, among the rest, he believed Brother VALENTINE moved that Judge CULVER have until Monday night to meet this report. That motion was voted down also. He (Judge C.,) then got up, and very likely took them a little by surprise. He read the evidence which he had taken. It was all verified, and in proper shape. Almost every witness he presented was a professor of religion, and those who had made it were willing to stand by it everywhere. It was then 11 o'clock at night; he was very much fatigued, and asked, as a personal favor, that the meeting be adjourned to any night they might choose to name, so as to give him a chance. A motion made to that effect shared the same fate as the rest. Never having had the report in his hands, he was obliged at that hour of the night to sum up his case on what he could catch of the report by ear. When he had concluded, and after 2½ o'clock, a motion was made for the previous question. It was declared carried, and he was excluded by a vote of 32 to 60. Mrs. BROWN's friends made an earnest appeal in her behalf. He, himself, spoke for her. "If you kill me," he said, "do not kill her; I know her to be innocent. Spare her out of respect for her friends and family. Don't crush a woman." That made a little impression on them. One brother asked, can there be evidence to convict this woman of adultery, for it is that really, with which she is charged? "Oh," said the Pastor, "you will understand, brethren, she is not charged with such an an offence as that; it is a simple impropriety." On a true count, the vote in her case stood 39 to 48. She was almost acquitted. At this time there were not probably more than 150 persons in the meeting, and a great many did not vote at all. The minority were allowed to depart before the final vote was taken. The members of the majority were detained by persons stationed at the door.

Mr. WATERBURY—And I saw Deacon MCCUTCHEON come out, put his arms round the neck of a member who was going away, and say: "Brother, we have just such a number of votes, and you must not leave, or we shall not have a majority."

Mr. CULVER resumed: He then asked, he said, for a mutual council, which was also refused. He now came to the second great branch of the case, and that was as to the merits, as appeared from the evidence. Whilst the report was being read, he took notes of it as fast as he could write, and it was from these notes he would give the substance of it. This document stated that the Committee had availed themselves of the labors of Messrs. WESTERVELT and STORY, the former Committee, and then proceeded to give a brief summary of the evidence. It gave, first, the testimony of Mr. DYCKMAN, which, in substance, was that when he lived in Mrs. BROWN's house—(four years and four months ago, as had been proved)—he was waked up one night—he could not recollect exactly at what hour—heard somebody go down the back steps leading from Mrs. BROWN's rooms, and say: "Good night;" and that he recognized Judge CULVER's voice, because he had seen him once, some year or so before.

Mr. RICHARDSON—That was the family that went to bed at 8 o'clock.

Judge CULVER—Yes, Sir.

Mrs. DYCKMAN said that CULVER was in the constant practice of visiting there, and she said that this particular night Mr. DYCKMAN alluded to, was Sunday night; that he staid three or four hours, and that she opened the door to let him in at 9 o'clock.

Her son ASA, testified that he had known CULVER to be there as late as 1 or 2 o'clock, and that he had known Mrs. BROWN to lock up her children in a cold room while CULVER was there, and that he had spoken of her cruelty in doing so. Mrs. SIEBERT said she went home one night with CORNELIA DYCKMAN and met Judge CULVER and Mrs. BROWN coming home; which was explained to be an occasion on which they had either been to see an important witness who worked in the shop in which her husband was killed, or a tenant with whom she had some business transactions. The Committee then said they could produce several other witnesses or charges, but deemed they had enough, and referred also to what had been remarked by some one, of what a man named CHAS. CULVER said. That was about all the evidence given in in the report of the Committee, with the exception of the statement of an Irishman named RYAN, regarding this lady in South Sixth-street.

The Committee then read two anonymous letters threatening the deacons and those identified with this prosecution, for the purpose of injuring him. Of the authorship of these letters he had no knowledge whatever. They charged that Deacon WESTERVELT had made the acquaintance of a widow and shaved his own note at 24 per cent.; that Deacon STORY had been an Episcopalian tract peddler and an open Communion Baptist, and that he had been intimate with a widow since this charge was made against him (Judge C.;) that Deacon FREEMAN had got into trouble with his own servant girl, and had been sent by CULVER to Judge JACOBS; that Deacon McCutcheon had got up a faction in the Mulberry-street Church, gone to another, and almost broken the heart of old Father MACLAY, and that he had intrigued Brother MASON away, and managed things generally in that way.

In answer to these charges each of the Deacons had to get up and make an explanation, which, doubtless, consumed an hour of his (the Judge's) valuable time. Deacon FREEMAN's wife rose to vindicate her husband, and the Deacon himself denied the whole charge, and said he never talked with Judge JACOBS at all on the subject, but, when met by the Judge a few days afterwards, the Judge reminded him of the circumstance, and he was obliged to admit it.

Judge CULVER then read the evidence of Mr. and Mrs. DYCKMAN, which had been taken in his presence before the Committee, and which showed, among other things, that at this time there was a misunderstanding between them and Mrs. BROWN as to the rent—the DYCKMAN's occupying the lower portion of the house, and Mrs. BROWN, who owned it, residing in the upper.

Of ASA, he said he was a young man of immoral associations, that he kept a porter-house on the corner of Grand-street, and was a very bad boy generally.

He then read the affidavit of CHESTER A. ARTHUR, his law partner at the period when the alleged improprieties were committed, who deposed that he boarded with Mr. CULVER; that Mr. CULVER managed an extensive law business for Mrs. BROWN, and that he was a man of great regularity of habit, and never out of his own house on a Sunday night.

ELIZA BROWN'S deposition—she being a colored servant, a member of the Methodist Church, a person of great veracity, and a runaway slave—was substantially to the same effect. Mr. CULVER never kept a night key, and she never knew him to be out on a Sunday night, while she lived in his family, as late as 10, 11, 12, 1, or 2 o'clock.

The statement of Mrs. E. D. CULVER was as follows:

I have read or heard read the statements of Mr. ARTHUR and of my late servant-woman, ELIZA BROWN, and my recollection as to the matters stated by them is in accordance with their statements. At the time when it is alleged the Dikeman family lived in Mrs. BROWN's house Mr. ARTHUR boarded, and ELIZA BROWN lived with us; and, during that time, I am confident my husband, unless out of town all night was never out at any such hours as 12, 1 or 2 o'clock. He could not have been out at any such hours, especially of a Sunday night, without being let in on his return, and without its being known and conversed about in the family, and especially without my knowing it when he came to bed, nor without my suspicions being aroused. The thing was impossible. And I solemnly aver that I knew of no such absence, or of his coming home at any such unusual hour, or of any conversation in the family to that effect, nor were my suspicions awakened in the least by any such occurrence. Had my husband been out or returned at any such hours, especially of a Sunday night, as 12, 1 or 2 o'clock, it would have arouse my suspicions and led me at once to a searching inquiry for the cause. He knows, as I know full well, he could not and would not have escaped a most thorough overhauling. But there was none, for the reason that there existed no occasion for any.

On the other hand, at the time spoken of, he was regular in his hours and especially on Sunday evenings, as we all were. Our girl was regular in her hours, in her return from her own meeting Sunday evenings. I had charge of the doors and of the house, and to me it is incredible that my husband could have been out and it not have been known and talked of in the family.

At the time spoken of he was not holding the office he now holds, but returned from his office, in New-York, about dark. His business calls were very numerous and annoying, from 6 to 8, or 8½ in the evening, and it was after that that he found any time to make his own calls.

In relation to these charges against my husband, it is due to myself and to him to say, that I have, from the outset, disbelieved them. I have, on all proper occasions, always expressed, and still express, that disbelief. I had no occasion at the time to believe them true, nor have I since had any.

That he has been as faithful and punctual in the discharge of all his religious duties as he should have been I do not nor does he, pretend. It would have given me great joy to have seen him more faithful and more humble and devoted.

I have carefully read the foregoing and affirm it true,
CAROLINE CULVER.

[Affirmation before Commissioner.]

Mr. ZEBLEY—I heard it stated by a member of the Church that Mr. CULVER never heard it read or subscribed to it.

Mrs. CULVER—That is my signature, and I have read it over very carefully.

Judge CULVER—Most of my local business had to be done between 6 and 8 in the evening, and I could not go to see Mrs. BROWN about her cases until after that was over. It was not convenient for her, with six children, to come to see me. My daughter LUCY's affidavit corroborates that of her mother. She regrets that her father didn't take his letter and leave the church when she and her mother did. Is that your signature, my daughter, and did you read this carefully over?

Miss LUCY—Yes, Sir.

Judge CULVER then read the testimony of the eldest son of Mrs. BROWN, her second son, and a little daughter, all contradicting the DYCKMANS' testimony point blank. He also read the depositions of six tenants of Mrs. BROWN, covering the period from 1852 till 1858, all testifying that there had been no improper visits received by Mrs. BROWN. Mrs. LETITIA COOPER swore that Mrs. DYCKMAN had a reputation for "lying" or "tattling;" that she used to have a quarrel with everybody she lived with. She had often known her to come to see her mother in her night-dress to talk about the neighbors. Mr. NICHOLS, Com. of Deeds, corroborated Mr. CULVER's statement as to the occurrences of the visit to the DYCKMANS', and gave Mrs. DYCKMAN an indifferent character as to veracity. The Rev. Mr. JOHNSON, the City missionary, testified of her that when her feelings were excited she would lose her religion.

In regard to CHARLES CULVER, a cousin of Mrs. BROWN, the Judge said he regarded him as the originator of these scandalous rumors. He was a boarder with her for a considerable period, but, on finding out the worthlessness of his character, she ordered him to leave. He refused, and insulted her. she sent for a Policeman and had him committed to prison. On his release, he went about among several families, uttered the falsest reproaches against her, made her character as black as falsehood could make, and vilified his own still more. He (Judge CULVER) went, accompanied by Mr. JACOBS, and having found where CHARLES CULVER was, they applied to him for a statement. That statement he readily made and swore to. It set forth that he had known Judge CULVER about a year, was acquainted with the Judge while boarding a Mrs. BROWN's, in South Third-street; always stopped in the house; never spent a night away to his knowledge during the time he remained there as a boarder; Judge CULVER called in the evening to see Mrs. BROWN perhaps twenty times in the whole year; he always left before he (deponent) went to bed; did not think he was ever there after 10 o'clock; he always appeared to come on business; never saw any improper conduct between Mrs BROWN and him, or anything that betokened any criminality between them; know nothing against any other man in connection with Mrs. B.; have been waited on by Mr. WESTERVELT, who has questioned me if I knew anything about Judge Culver; he seemed very anxious to learn something about Judge CULVER; he asked me to call at his house in Williamsburgh; called and saw STORY there; Mr. WESTERVELT said he knew enough about Mrs. BROWN, but they wanted to get something against CULVER.

That statement, the Judge proceeded, was dated the 18th of January.

From the day the Committee learned CHAS. CULVER was tacked down as a witness, they determined never to let him (the Judge) have an opportunity to meet the evidence they might bring against him. It was even said that he had bribed CULVER, or procured him in some improper manner to make this statement. In answer to that he would offer the following statement of Judge JACOBS:

On the 18th day of January last I accompanied Judge CULVER to the steamer St. Louis, then lying in the East River, for the purpose of seeing one CHARLES CULVER, who (as we had learned that forenoon) was in charge of that vessel.

After some preliminary conversation, of no importance, Judge CULVER stated to CHARLES CULVER, that he had come to see him in consequence of some injurious reports, seriously affecting his character which he had heard had been circulated by CHARLES CULVER.

CHARLES CULVER affected some surprise, saying that he did not know anything which he had said, or could say, against Judge CULVER, and asked "what the reports were?"

Judge CULVER then recapitulated the various charges, as to his visits at and improper intimacy with Mrs. BROWN, &c., which he had understood had been made by him, (CHARLES CULVER;) all of which CHARLES CULVER most positively denied having made or circulated; saying, that several persons had asked him as to what he knew against Judge CULVER, but that he had never said anything against him, as he knew nothing, &c.

Up to this time he had been silent, having taken from my pocket a small memorandum book, from which I tore a leaf, about 2 by 3 inches, on which I attempted to make a brief minute of these denials for my own satisfaction, and to enable me to remember his exact language. Seeing me thus employed, he inquired if we (or I) wished any paper. On my replying affirmatively, he brought from the cabin (being in the Steward's room) some paper and handed it to me. It then, for the first time, occurred to me to reduce his entire statement to writing, and have him to subscribe to the same, and asked if he had any ink aboard? when he at once brought some from the cabin, and arranged for me a temporary desk.

I then remarked, that I had also heard these reports—that Judge CULVER and Mrs. BROWN were my personal friends, for whose reputation I felt some regard—that I had been much surprised to hear him so emphatically disavow those charges, as I had reason to believe he had made them, &c.

He again denied having done so; when I said that, although I had not come there with any such intention, yet I should like to reduce his statements to writing if he had no objections.

He hesitated somewhat, and asked what I wished such a statement for, and to what use I intended to put it; to which I replied, that I thought he ought to make such a statement, in justice to those whose characters had suffered by the reports, as well as to himself, and that the paper would be used to protect their reputation, and to silence any further attacks upon them which might be predicated upon what he was charged with having reported. He then consented, and I proceeded to write his statements as he made them, in answer to the questions put to him, mainly by myself, and in doing so, I used his own language almost verbatim, there being, I think, but one word (but of the same meaning) which I substituted for his own expression. Judge CULVER also asked a few questions, and said he wished him to state fully and unreservedly all that he knew or had said concerning him to a certain Committee or any one else. He made his statement deliberately and freely. I read aloud each sentence as I wrote it, and when concluded, I read it all over to him carefully, and asked him to make such corrections, or addition or explanation which he wished; he did so, and when he pronounced it all right, I asked him to sign it, which he did.

I then said, as I was a Commissioner of Deeds, I would like to have him make oath to the truth of the document, to which he also consented without any persuasion, and I administered the oath to him, in which he solemnly swore that the statement then and there signed by him, was the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, "So help him God." I appended the Jurat, and we left him.

I deem it proper to say that we did not go there with any intention or expectation of getting any such statement from him, and nothing of the kind had been spoken of between Judge CULVER and myself. During the entire interview no threats, promises, or bribes, or anything approaching thereto, were made use of by either of us, nor did I infer from the appearance of the parties at any time, or from any of the conversation that anything of the kind was thought of, or that they had previously met and conversed on the subject, as has been intimated to myself and others.

In February last, soon after Mrs. BROWN had returned home, she called upon me, and requested me to go with her to see Mrs. DIKEMAN in reference to similar charges, which it was gave any understood had been told about her and Judge CULVER by Mrs. DIKEMAN, I would have preferred not going, as I feared my motives in so doing could be misunderstood and misrepresented, but Mrs. BROWN was a friend whom I had always esteemed as a Christian woman, and I could not refuse to assist her thus situated, while struggling almost single handed in defending her character.

We went to Mrs DIKEMAN's on the afternoon of a very stormy day, the snow falling heavily. At the door we learned from a lad of some 14 years that Mr. and Mrs DIKEMAN were both at home, down stairs. We were shown into the parlor, while the boy went down to announce us, and in the course of a few minutes we were joined by Mr. DIKEMAN, who also told us that Mrs DIKEMAN was in, and asked us down to the basement.—there we waited nearly half an hour, expecting the appearance of Mrs. DIKEMAN, I meanwhile conversing with Mr. DIKEMAN on ordinary topics, we having been long acquainted. We were then told that Mrs DIKEMAN had just run in next door to see a sick neighbor, but would soon return, and after waiting another half hour I ventured to suggest that Mrs. DIKEMAN should be informed of our desire to see her.

The boy accordingly went out, and immediately returned saying that Mrs. DIKEMAN was not next door. Mr. DIKEMAN then said she had probably gone to North Second-street to visit her daughter, and would not return, as she did not intend to see Mrs. BROWN. I expressed my regret and a conversation then ensued between us all, as to the object of our visit, in which Mr. DIKEMAN again said it made no difference whether his wife was in or out inasmuch as she was determined not to have an interview with Mrs. BROWN; that all she had to say about Mrs BROWN had been or would be told to the Church Committee. Mrs. BROWN spoke of the treatment she had received, of the peculiarly defenceless position she occupied in not being allowed to meet her accusers, and submitted whether it was just that Mrs. DIKEMAN should make statements to others affecting her character, and then refuse to give her an interview. Mr. DIKEMAN replied he was not aware that Mrs. DIKEMAN had said anything against Mrs. BROWN's character; that he certainly knew nothing against her, and for the future he would not consent to any more interviews between Mrs DIKEMAN and the Committee, unless Mrs. BROWN was present, and we left the house.

Such is substantially a correct account of the two interviews above described beyond which I have not been connected with any of the matter concerning Judge CULVER and Mrs BROWN. I make this statement in justice to all parties concerned, as well as to myself individually.

I certainly do not wish to intrude my opinions on this subject on any person, or body of persons, but knowing somewhat of the character and general reputation of the persons generally understood as being important witnesses in the case of Judge C. and Mrs. BROWN, I trust I may be pardoned for briefly referring to them.

Of CHARLES CULVER lit le need be said; however true in some respects his affidavit made before me may be, he certainly committed a terrible moral perjury,

FROM KANSAS.

Trial of General James H. Lane for the Murder of Jenkins.

TENTH DAY.

Correspondence of the New York Times.

LAWRENCE, Friday, June 26, 1858.

Mrs. Ann Jenkins, (widow of the deceased)—I was standing by the north window of my house when my husband was killed; I could see the premises where he fell; saw the firing and heard the reports; I saw but two shots; I saw my husband fall; if there were more I could not have seen them, as I left immediately; I took a position by the window just as my husband was cutting down the gate; I didn't leave the window until I started to go to my husband after he had fell; Lane fired the first shot; I did not see the person who fired the second shot; the party who went with my husband had a pistol and Sharpe's rifle, and nothing else; I had the opportunity of knowing positively what weapons they had.

[There was a discussion on the effect produced by the shot in the clothing, in order to rebut Mrs. Mandell's testimony as to the position of the axe; the clothing was exhibited in Court, and identified by the witness.]

By Col. YOUNG—I saw my husband loading fire arms on the day of his death; a pistol and Sharpe's rifle; he gave the pistol to Green; this was a few minutes before he started to go over; he did not come to town until our regular dinner was over; the hands and boarders had finished their dinner by that time.

Wm. Hutchinson, sworn—By Mr. STANTON—Since this occurrence between Gen. Lane and Mr. Jenkins, have you heard Gen. Lane say anything as to the order of the shooting?

Objected to. Objection overruled.

Witness—I was at Gen. Lane's house about an hour after Jenkins was shot; the room was filled with persons, so that I could not see or speak to Lane; he was talking in reference to the event, and seemed to be answering questions; I understood General Lane to say that he fired first; that when the fire was returned he turned sideways, so as to present a small surface, and received a shot in his leg; about ten minutes after, in answer to another question, probably, he alluded to the same point, and modified his statement somewhat; was not sure both fired at the same time.

Cross-examined—Mr. Lane did, I think, state at that time that Jenkins had an axe in his hand, but don't think he said he was advancing; Lane claimed all were armed, I think; don't recollect him saying that in a quarter of a minute; I think he did say that he begged Jenkins and party not to come into the yard, and not to advance towards him; don't think Lane said that Jenkins was threatening to kill him at the gate; a great many persons were in the room at the time; the conversation took place an hour after the homicide; I stayed not more than fifteen minutes.

ELEVENTH DAY.

J. G. Haskett recalled—I was at the house of Gen. Lane on the day of the affray two or three times within two hours after it occurred; at the second time I was there he told me of the whole affair; I asked him who fired first; he said he supposed he did; I asked him if he knew; he told me he was not conscious of any firing till he fired, though he was not certain.

Cross-examined—He said Jenkins was advancing on him with the axe at the time he fired; said he retreated, and Jenkins was coming upon him so fast that he thought he would reach him before he reached the house; that at the time he fired he was covered by three pistols; said that the discharge of the pistol was immediately after he fired; Lane said he was from 35 to 40 feet when he fired.

Charles Dyer was sworn, but no new point was elicited. In the main he related a conversation with Lane, in which he narrated the substance of what the testimony for the defence has been as to the order of the firing, position of the parties, &c.

H. W. Jenkins was recalled—He identified one of two axes shown in the Court, as the one used by his uncle on the gate on the day of his death. Witness then said: I understood Green to say at the barn, when arrested by Walker, that if his pistols had gone off the second time Lane would not have lived to have got into the house; at the time Jenkins was shot he had no axe; I have a slight recollection of taking the axe into the yard myself, after picking it up at the gate. That witness was no further axed.

Ray Green recalled—I have said that if my pistol had gone off the second time Lane would not have got into the house; have told Nichols, of Topeka, I would shoot with Gen. Lane at three feet, or any son of a gun who would take it up.

A Voice—"I'll take it up."

Gen. Lane—When you get ready to assassinate me, Green, just send me word.

Witness—I never assassinate any man.

The Court here checked this flourish of bravado.

Witness resumed—The first time I pulled the trigger the pistol went off; the second time a cap snapped merely.

The Court here said, that when the pistol came into its custody, the first cap had been exploded and the second barrel was empty, having been discharged—thus proving that the witness had stated falsely. This was somewhat unwelcome to the prosecution.

Counsel for the prosecution announced that they had closed their rebutting testimony.

The defence immediately called other witnesses as rebutting evidence. There were no new points elicited by any of the first. Four or five witnesses were called to prove that General LANE had told them immediately after the occurrence that the party fired two or three shots at him before he fired—that JENKINS was advancing with the axe raised, and other points substantially as already proved by the defence.

Two others were called, who were within one-fourth of a mile at the time of the firing, and who heard other reports before the heavy gun.

TWELFTH DAY.

The summing up began on the 27th. The Hon. Frederick P. Stanton argued for the prosecution. He protested against that decision of the Court, by which the evidence as to the ownership of the house Lane lived in, the fence, gate and well, was ruled out as irrelevant, especially after it had permitted the defence to prove possession of the premises; in consequence of which decision the full merits of the prosecution cannot come before this tribunal or the public. The whole circumstances of the case, he argued, were such as ought to have weight with the Court. Lane killed Jenkins, when not in personal danger, with a gun containing a load, and perhaps not excessive, but certainly a deadly load. The threats—his coming out again armed, and waiting until the party were within a short distance before firing, are sufficient evidence to prove malice and deadly intent, setting aside the technical legal point as to the right of defence against trespass.

Mr. Stanton spoke for two hours and a half—the forenoon session.

The afternoon was similarly occupied by Mr. Ewing, on the part of the defence.

A Chapter of Murders.

MAN KILLED IN A QUARREL.

An affray occurred in the southeast suburbs of Columbus, Ohio, last Sunday evening, which produced intense excitement among the citizens of that vicinity,

A pic-nic was held at the South Burying-ground, southeast of the city, last Sunday evening, under the auspices of a grocery-keeper of the neighborhood, at which a fight occurred between some of the members of Hook and Ladder Company No. 1, and four German butchers, named Conrad Seibel, John Freenbager, George K. Fulk and George Sluter, in which the latter party got badly beaten. Smarting under the injuries they had received, they left the ground in an express-wagon, threatening to return armed.

They drove to the town, shortly after returned, and, on the Livingston road, about 100 yards from the Groveport pike, met HENRICK KORRELL, GEORGE HOCHSTETTER and the latter's wife. SEIBEL, who appears to have been the leader, jumped out of the wagon and accosted KORRELL, who protested that they had not taken part in the late fight; and it seems the latter convinced SEIBEL that such was the fact, as they shook hands and were about to part, when one of the party in the wagon told SEIBEL that KORRELL had been in the affray, and struck him.

SEIBEL immediately turned upon KORRELL, drew a butcher-knife and stabbed him four times, one blow driving the knife through the chest-bone nearly under the left arm. KORRELL staggered to the fence, when HOCHSTETTER interfered, who also received several severe cuts about the forehead and under one eye. HOCHSTETTER'S wife then went to assist her husband, and succeeded in getting hold of the knife, but SEIBEL wrenched it from her, cutting her face and hands in the scuffle. SEIBEL then retreated to his wagon and the party drove off. KORRELL was carried insensible to the house of Mr. SCHNEIDER, near by, where medical aid was called, but proved availing. It was about sundown when he was stabbed, and he died at 9 o'clock on Sunday evening. KORRELL was a young man, perhaps 22 years of age, unmarried, and has, as we learn, but a single relative in this city.

Mr. HOCHSTETTER and his wife were severely but not seriously injured. The former testified before the Mayor yesterday morning in the preliminary examination of the case.

SEIBEL and his party were arrested on Sunday evening, had a hearing yesterday morning, and the case was continued till this afternoon at 2 o'clock. SEIBEL, when brought before the Mayor, hung down his head and appeared sulky and sullen. They were all remanded to the county jail for safe keeping.

FOUR PERSONS KILLED BY AN INSANE MAN.

A most appalling tragedy was enacted in Columbus County, N. C., just after daylight on the morning of the 29th instant, resulting in the death of four persons. JOSHUA ROUSE killed his father, his wife and two of his small children, cutting off their heads with an axe. His eldest son ran over to the residence of ISAAC H. POWELL, Esq., and told Mr. P. what had happened, who got W. G. SMITH, Esq., and they went on towards ROUSE'S. On their way they met ROUSE in pursuit of his son with an axe. He said he wanted to kill him. On meeting Messrs. POWELL and SMITH he dropped the axe and held out his hand, when they arrested him. He is now in jail. ROUSE had been for some time in the Insane Asylum, but was taken out by his guardian some three or four weeks ago, since which time he has been permitted to run at large. There is every reason to believe that he was insane at the time when he committed the terrible deed for which he has been arrested."

LAW. INTELLIGENCE.

Important Decision in Admiralty—Interesting to Ship Owners.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.—MAY TERM, 1858.

Before Judge Betts.

William E. Collis and William Mitchell vs. The Schooner Coernine, Fraley W. Moore, Simeon J. Lathan, and Lorenzo A. Webb, claimants.—The libelants, ship-chandlers and traders, residents and doing business in New-York, were in the habit of dealing on credit in the line of their trade with Gilbert L. Moore, a resident of Williamston, in North Carolina, engaged in building and sailing vessels, and other transactions, in that State.

The correspondence between those parties proves that such course of dealing was in use between them anterior to the month of September, 1856, and was continued subsequently on open accounts of debit and credit. At that time, in an interview between them in New York, it was agreed that the libelants should supply the equipments and outfits necessary to complete the schooner Coernine, which Moore was about constructing at his residence in North Carolina; and that they should furnish whatever should be required to that end upon the written or verbal orders of Moore.

On the 5th of March, 1857, Moore wrote the libelants from Williamston by Samuel D. Hines, introducing the latter as the intended master of the Coernine when completed, and requesting that his memoranda of materials and supplies should be filled by the libelants "at as low rates as possible," the large amounts of course on the regular times, "in order to give the vessel some time to make a part before it is due;" "the small memoranda of which I shall expect to pay between one and three months;" for instance "the bill for making sails, iron works, &c." The same letter had advised the libelants that Moore would, between July and September, pay them a considerable amount for the purchase of the sails and rigging for the Coernine; those, as it appears from the correspondence between the parties, being articles not dealt in by the libelants, but with some others were to be purchased by them in New-York for Moore.

By letters of dates of March 14 and 20, the libelants advised Moore that they were hastening to fulfill all Hines' orders; that hemp, sails, blocks, &c., had been purchased by them. On the 18th of March they further wrote that all the goods were then ready, and requested a remittance of funds, as they had to make large purchases, and their payments for duck, &c., then, and for the next sixty days, will be heavy."

By letter of April 8, the libelants informed Moore that the goods were all on board the vessel at New-York for transportation to North Carolina, and that they inclose "bill of lading and amount of supplies, amounting in all to $4,074 35," "the cash bills, amounting to $916 77," they desired him to remit immediately.

On the 11th July, 1856, MOORE executed at North Carolina, a promissory note to the libelants, or order for $600, payable at ninety days, and on the 31st of July; at the same place, another note for the same amount ($600), payable in ninety days thereafter to the libelants or ordor; and on the 24th of September, following, another promissory note, dated at New-York, payable to libelants or order for $1,000, four months after date.

These several promissory notes were produced in open court by the counsel for the libelants on the hearing of the cause, as having been given for the debt in prosecution, and were delivered up to be cancelled.

It appeared in proof that the materials supplied by the libelants were necessary for the construction and use of the schooner, and could not have been procured at the place where she was built and fitted out. They were supplied for her service, and after her completion she was dispatched by Moore, her owner, from Plymouth, North Carolina, her port of registry, upon a series of foreign voyages. June 2, 1857, she sailed for Guadeloupe, thence to Marie Galante, thence to St. Pierre, Martinique, thence to the Island of Nevis, on trading voyages; thence to St. Thomas, where she was chartered for Porto Rico and New-York, at which last place she arrived in the month of August, remained in the port fifteen days at quarantine, and eight days afterward in discharging and reloading, and on the 22d day of September sailed again on round charters by the way of the West Indies back to New-York, where she arrived Jan. 26, 1858, and the libel in this cause was filed the next day. The libelants were personally apprized of the vessel being in this port within two or three days after her first arrival here, and also knew the whole period of her continuance in port. The libelants charged that the schooner being in Wilmington, N. C., and in want of ship chandlery, sails, rigging, materials, labor and supplies, to render her seaworthy and fit to navigate the high seas and proceed upon a voyage to the West Indies, they furnished and delivered such articles to the vessel at that place, &c. These claimants intervened and set up a title to the vessel under an assignment of her in trust for the payment of debts made to them by Gilbert L. Moore prior to the commencement of this action; and by formal answer they denied every material allegation in the libel upon which the action is based. They especially denied the jurisdiction of this Court over the subject matter, and insisted on the argument upon an explicit judgment upon that branch of the defence, because of its eminent importance to the interests of navigation and commerce in American vessels, and because it is supposed the law governing that subject is obscure or indefinite in its provisions, or has become seemingly so, under the rules by which it is interpreted and administered by the Courts.

There was also a separate intervention and defence to the action in the name of James C. Willett, Sheriff of the City and County of New-York, who interposed and claimed the vessel by virtue of process of attachment out of a State Court in favor of a creditor of Gilbert L. Moore, the alleged owner of the schooner. This branch of the defence was disposed of at the last May Term of the Court, on an issue in law (24 vol., MSS. Decisions, 40,) and will not be further regarded in the report of this case.

The case was argued upon the pleadings and proofs by Messrs. N. Hoxie and E. C. Benedict, for libelants, and Messrs. Gerard, Jr., and B. D. Silliman for claimants.

BETTS, J.—The libelants place their right of action in this cause upon the grounds that the transaction between them and Gilbert L. Moore, in relation to the outfit and supply of materials for building and equipping the schooner Coernine, was a maritime contract, concerning a foreign vessel and her employment in navigation and commerce, and that a debt was thereby created, which became by implication of law a lien upon the vessel, accompanying her wherever she went; or that by the local law of North Carolina, under which she was built, registered and owned, and where the supplies were used, the schooner was made subject to a lien for that debt, which, by the principles of the general maritime law, is enforceable in this Court.

The position on the part of the claimants is, that this Court has no jurisdiction over the subject matter of the suit in any aspect of the case under which it is presented by the pleadings and proofs, and the cases of Pratt vs. Reid, (19 How. R., 359,) and the claimants of the steamboat Jefferson vs. Beers et al. (not yet published, but a copy of which has been furnished me) are relied upon as having settled, by the solemn adjudications of the Supreme Court, the law definitively to that effect.

In view of the magnitude of interests depending upon the general question in this District, and its importance practically in the every-day business dealings within the port between mechanics and material men, and shipowners and masters, it is deemed desirable that this specific point should be made the prominent subject of consideration and decision; especially if those judgments of the Supreme Court have worked any change in the rules heretofore supplied to this class of cases, and have diminished the securities formerly enforced in this Court in behalf of that order of creditors.

In the first place, it is important to consider what were the special features in the case of Pratt vs. Reed, adjudged upon by the Supreme Court, and what character was affixed by that decision to the contract or credit in regard to the necessaries supplied a foreign vessel on a voyage, in order to give them a privilege or lien against the vessel.

The steamboat Sultana was employed on the Western Lakes, in the transportation of passengers and freight. She was enrolled and owned at Buffalo, and a debt was contracted at Erie, in Pennsylvania, by her owner and master, for supplies of coal to her during the performance of a succession of trips for a period of about two years. It was assumed by the Court to have been necessary for the navigation of the vessel that she should be furnished with coal on those occasions, although the proof on that head was held to be loose and indefinite. The libelant furnished her coal in that manner when demanded, from June, 1852, to May, 1854, and rendered a bill therefor, containing a running account of debits and credits. The owner of the boat usually navigated her as master, and was present when the supplies were furnished. When he was not present they were furnished at the request of the person in command. The answer denied that the supplies were furnished on the credit of the boat, and averred they were furnished on the credit of the master.

The Court laid out of view the inadequacy of proof that the supply of coal was an actual necessity to the navigation of the vessel, within the Admiralty rule, at the time it was supplied her, because of the more serious difficulty in the case of the libelant, in the absence of any proof to show that there was also a necessity at the time of procuring the supplies for a credit upon the vessel, which was asserted by the Court to be as essential as that of the necessity of the article itself. It seems to be supposed, the Court remarks, "that circumstances of less pressing necessity for supplies or repairs, and an implied hypothecation of the vessel to procure them, will satisfy the rule, than in a case of a necessity sufficient to justify a loan of money on bottomry for the like purpose. We think this is a misapprehension."

The Court proceeds to fortify the position of law taken by them on those facts, by reasoning against the sufficiency of the facts to authorize an implication of a lien in the case, and by an intimation strongly disfavoring the increase of maritime liens of this class, upon the lakes and rivers, as tending to perplex and embarrass business rather than furnish facilities to carry it forward, and declaring that such liens should be strictly limited to the necessities of commerce which created them.

The jurisdiction of the Court over the question is one and the same when it concerns the business of commerce and navigation between ports and places in different States and Territories upon the lakes and navigable waters connecting the lakes, as is possessed and exercised in case the vessels are employed in navigation and commerce upon the high seas or tide waters within the Admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States. (Act of Congress, Feb. 26, 1845, 5 Statutes at Large, 726.)

The similitude, and indeed identity, of the present case with that of Pratt vs. Reed, in their leading features, appears thus to be nearly exact. In both instances the supplies and necessaries were obtained in ports of States foreign to those in which the vessels respectively belonged, and were procured through the direct contract and orders of the owner, who also in each case was master of the vessel at the time. In neither case was there any stipulation for direct payment of the purchase prices at the time of purchase, nor any terms of credit agreed upon between the parties. The decision in Pratt vs. Reed, therefore, in no way rested upon a question of implied authority in a master to pledge a vessel on such a credit, because the dealing was by the owner directly; but the controlling consideration which governed the case was, that however imminent the necessity of the vessel for the supplies might be, the case could not be brought within the cognizance of the Federal Court, unless it appeared that the necessity was equally urgent that the responsibility of the vessel should be pledged for payment.

It seems to me, therefore, that the case of Pratt vs. Reed is susceptible of no other interpretation than that an implied lien for stores, materials, supplies or outfits of any kind, can never be raised against an American vessel in the Courts of the United States upon the mere fact that they were furnished her on credit out of her home port, and are necessary to her navigation and employment. The further fact must be shown that the supplies could not be obtained on the personal credit of her owners. That principle covers and negatives every claim to a hypothecation of the schooner in security of the debt in the present case. It is unnecessary to go further and say the doctrine of the decision significantly implies, that the act of the owner of the vessel in personally incurring the debt and obtaining the credit, has no higher effect in imparting a lien than the act of a master [solely, for the entire dealing in that case appears to have been conducted or sanctioned personally by the owner himself.

The particulars in which the present case is distinguishable from that, weaken instead of strengthen the presumption that both parties contemplated at the time of the sale and purchase of the materials furnished by the libelants any lien therefor upon the schooner; but for the reasons before suggested, I do not recapitulate and press the considerations arising out of the pleadings and proofs tending to show that no liability against the vessel was in view of the parties at the time, and that the dealing was most probably on the footing of their accustomed transactions, and wholly one of personal credit. One distinction, however, ought not to be passed by, which is, that the materials, labor, &c., obtained in this case were not for the necessary repair of this schooner, but were for her original construction, she then being on the stocks in a course of building.

It is intended to dispose of this case in subordination to the judgment of the Supreme Court in the two recent cases referred to, and to restrain it carefully within the fair and plain import of the doctrines laid down in those decisions without any inquiry into the correspondence or disaccord of those judgments, or either of them, with the rule of law antecedently prevailing in Maritime Courts upon those subjects. It is not the province of this Court to canvass the reasons upon which these decisions are founded, or attempt to measure their validity by any supposed inconsistency or incongruity with prior doctrines of the Supreme Court. They stand the final existing law which governs analogous facts coming within their just scope and meaning.

The People's Ferry Company of Boston, Claimants of the Steamboat Jefferson, Appelants, vs. Joseph Beers and David Warner, Assignees of E. C. Terry—Was a case decided by the Supreme Court in December Term, 1857. A vessel owned in New Jersey was built and supplied with materials in that State by the libelants, residents in New-York, on credit and without any express pledge of the vessel for the debt.

The propositions of law determined by the Court, and the facts to which they are applied, are especially stated by the Judge who delivered the opinion of the Court.

"The only matter in controversy is (say the Court) whether the District Courts of the United States have jurisdiction to proceed in Admiralty to enforce liens for labor and materials furnished in constructing vessels to be employed in the navigation of waters to which the Admiralty jurisdiction extends."

"We have the simple case," continues the Judge, "whether these ship carpenters had a lien for work and materials that can be enforced in rem in Admiralty.

The question presented involves a contest between the State and Federal Government. The latter has no power or jurisdiction beyond what the Constitution confers. The contest here is not so much between rival tribunals as between distinct sovereignties claiming to exercise power over contracts, property and personal franchises.

What were meant in 1789 by 'Cases of Admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, must be meant now.' What was reserved to the States to be regulated by their own institutions, cannot be rightfully infringed by the General Government, either through its Legislative or Judicial Department.

The contract (in the case) is simply for building the hull of a ship and delivering it on the water. 'She was constructed and delivered according to the contract.' 'The Admiralty jurisdiction is limited to contracts, claims and services purely maritime, and touching rights and duties appertaining to commerce and navigation.' Judge Hopkinson, in 1781, declared as respects ship-builders, that the practice of former times doth not justify the Admiralty's taking cognizance of their suits: "We feel warranted in saying that at no time since this has been an independent nation has such a practice been allowed.'

The Judge said: "It is proper, however, to notice the fact, that District Courts have recognized the existence of Admiralty jurisdiction in rem, against a vessel to enforce a carpenter's bill for work and materials in constructing it, in cases where a lien had been created by the local law of the State where the vessel was built. Thus far, however, in our judicial history, no case of the kind has been sanctioned by this Court."

This adjudication very explicitly determines that a contract in a port of one of the United States to construct a vessel in a port of another State by actually building her or supplying materials for such construction is not a maritime contract creating a lien upon the vessel, for the value of the labor or supplies, which can be enforced in a Federal Court. That the debt or contract does not make a case of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction within the meaning of the Constitution and laws of the United States, and if it can in any way be cognizable in those tribunals, it is only so by force of State legislation imposing the debt as a lien on the vessel, which obligation the National Court executes and carries into effect; but the same judgment emphatically declares that no instance of such proceedings which appear to have occurred in some of the inferior National Courts has been sanctioned by the Supreme Court.

I had never supposed the jurisdiction of the United States Districts Courts over this class of liens was imparted by State legislation, or that those tribunals could in any way derive judicial competency or jurisdiction from State grant; and without being restrained by the significant intimation of the Supreme Court, I should not be any way inclined to administer affirmatively, as the foundation of a right and remedy in admiralty, any enactment by a State Legislature.

Considering that the decision last referred to withdraws from the cognizance of this Court the subject matter of the present action as not being one of Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction, I deem it wholly useless and extra-judicial to inquire whether the statute of North Carolina, put in evidence in this cause, is applicable in its provisions to the contract and debt now in suit, or is of any force out of the territorial jurisdiction of that State. The labor claimed by the libelants to have been furnished this schooner in North Carolina must be understood to be the work of builders, personally or by their agents, and falls directly within the judgment of the Court, as not a claim of a maritime character.

The later decision of the Supreme Court upon a legal question within its jurisdiction, settles for the government of all inferior judicatories the practical meaning and force of the proposition so determined; and it is no part of the function of subordinate Courts to adjudge or even inquire whether such determination comports with or subverts antecedent judgments of the same forum upon similar questions. The last decision is practically the final one.

Neither of the two cases last passed upon by the Supreme Court in relation to implied liens in favor of material men and laborers, against American vessels in American ports, demanded the direct and broad answer to the inquiry whether those liens exist or can be enforced in the Federal Courts in any form, by virtue of the general maritime law; but the principles announced by the Court in those cases render it quite palpable that scarcely another advance remains to be made in order to abrogate that remedy absolutely and reinstate and restrict the admiralty powers of the judiciary in respect to those credits, in subordination to the rule of the common law as that was administered under the English jurisprudence at the time of the adoption of the United States Constitution.

It is my province to accept and pursue the law as declared by the Supreme Court; and in my opinion the rule established by that tribunal in those cases determines that the claim put forth in this action either for building, or constructing, or outfitting, or providing materials, supplies, labor, rigging, or ship stores necessary to render this vessel seaworthy and fit for navigation at sea, is not within the jurisdiction of the Court, and accordingly the libel must be dismissed, with costs.

The amount in demand being sufficient to authorize an appeal of the case to the Court of last resort, I put the decision specifically upon the question of jurisdiction, that being directly involved, and being of high practical moment to the mercantile, manufacturing and shipping interest of the country, and shall forbear discussing those other features in the case bearing strongly against the adequacy of the pleadings and proofs to sustain the action in this form, if the cases of Pratt vs. Reed, and the ferry Company of Boston vs. Beers, had interposed no legal impediment in the suit.

Decree accordingly.

Danger of Playing With Edged Tools.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

Before Commissioner R. E. Stillwell.

The United States vs. Chauncey R. Jump.—The defendant was a member of the Metropolitan Police of the Twenty-first Precinct, and was charged with passing counterfeit coin. The complaint was made by Joseph J. Meigs, and the first hearing was had on Tuesday last, from which it was adjourned to Wednesday, the 7th inst. A large number of policemen, who were acquainted with Jump, were present and testified in the case. Defendant was arrested on the 15th of May.

Elisha H. Weldy, a detective policeman, swore that defendant told him when he was arrested, that he (defendant) had purchased bogus quarters at various times; that he commenced purchasing last Fall, (supposed for the purpose of obtaining proof against the counterfeiters,) and that he did not acquaint the Captain of it, for the reason that he (the Captain) would give the "case" to some favorite, and he (defendant) would lose it; he said he purchased the coin at the Charleston House, on West-street, near the Battery. Witness went there twice with defendant, but he did not ask witness to enter the place to arrest them.

Thomas Farmer, of No. 589 First-avenue, swore that the defendant gave him a bad quarter on the latter end of February, or first of March, at his store, where he and Meigs got drinks.

Joseph G. Meigs who claims to be a physican, but whose record is not a clear one in the matter of bad coins, testified that Jump passed counterfeit coin on him, and also upon Farmer, between the 15th of April and the first week in May; he had received altogether twenty odd bogus coins, the last Jump offered to let him have for 40 cents on the dollar; witness paid fifteen to a person by the name of Benson, at an eating-house at Montgomery Hall; witness acknowledged on the cross-examination that he received a portion of the money knowing it to be bad, and that he paid 40 cents on the dollar for it; Meigs has been under arrest for the offence.

Richard Quidor, a policeman, testified to receiving twelve bad quarters from the defendant in exchange for a three dollar bill.

Francis C. Speight, a Captain of Police of the Twenty-first Precinct, testified to the regulations of the Department as to the duty of patrolmen to make report to the commanding officer in all cases where they are engaged in ferreting out counterfeiters; that no order of arrest is given without permission of the Captain; that a patrolman cannot be absent from his beat without leave, under penalty of losing his pay; when there is a report about counterfeits he detailed certain officers.

Nathaniel B. Abbott was sworn for the defence, and testified to the good character of Jump, both as a man and an officer. Also, that the reputation of Dr. Meigs is that he is an old offender; had heard so since this occurrence; had heard he had been to State Prison; it was customary for Policemen to "work up" cases on their own hook, when off duty, which is not generally reported; did not consider it necessary to have a warrant to arrest a party where there was a witness against him.

Abel Moses, sworn—Had been a policeman for four and a half years; had known Jump ever since he had been on the police; about the middle of March, Jump told him he knew where there were some counterfeiters, and he was trying to ferret them out; witness desired to be associated with him in finding the dies, &c.; it was customary to report suspicious cases, when on duty, and when off to "work them up."

Several other witnesses were examined, but they brought out no new facts.

Upon a full hearing of the case the Commissioner discharged the defendant, the testimony being contradictory and insufficient.

Previous to the decision the Police Commissioners had discharged Mr. Jump from the Police. He has, however, applied to be reinstated, and has presented the certificate of the Commissioner, exonerating him from the charge. He will probably be reinstated, and be paid for the time he has been unjustly held under arrest.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before the Hon. Justice Sutherland.

DECISIONS.

James Hanley vs. John Parsons.—Motion for a Receiver and for the continuance of the injunction granted, with $10 costs to abide event.

F. H. Orvis vs. J. H. Ransom et al.—The time for defendants to answer extended until the hearing and decision of appeal from order of Judge INGRAHAM overruling demurrer, provided the defendants stipulate that this action shall be tried before the actions in the Superior Court and Common Pleas; otherwise motion denied without costs.

Simon Ehrich vs. B. Danzigin.—The order of publication, judgment, and all other proceedings of the plaintiff must be set aide with $10 costs. The question of due service by publication being a jurisdictional question, there can be no amendment.

The Park Bank vs. Loomis Ballard—Default of defendant set aside, and cause restored to calendar for trial, on payment, to plaintiff, of costs of circuit and all subsequent costs, and $10 costs of this motion.

In re Christ Protestant Episcopal Church.—Order granted.

George McIvor vs. Mary McIvor.—Divorce granted.

Magdalna Weisser vs. Frede. G. Weisser.—Divorce granted.

Wm. S. Tobias vs. Sarah Tobias.—Divorce granted.

Wm. O'Brien et al vs. James Clapp.—The defendant can take an order that the plaintiffs deliver a further bill of particulars of their claim in this action, within ten days, stating from whom the stocks were bought, and to whom sold, with rates of sale, &c. I do not think that the facts and circumstances to show materiality of books and papers, are sufficiently set forth to authorize the order for the discovery specifically asked for.

Before the Hon. Justice Ingraham.

Case et al. vs. Myer et al.—Motion denied, with $10 costs.

Wm. Young vs. Jos. Wilson—Referred to H. P. Hunt, Esq.

Underhill et al. vs. Vanzaudt et al.—Referred to Robert Emmet, Esq.

John Golden vs. James Myers—Motion granted on payment of costs, on condition that plaintiff shall not apply for a temporary injunction prior to the October Special Term.

Benjamin Crissey vs. S. D. Crissey—Motion granted.

James Mason vs. A. Meucci—Motion granted. Defendant's costs $10, to abide event.

S. Hopkins et al. vs. R. Whipple et al—Motion granted by default.

Before the Hon. Judge Sutherland.

In the matter of Moritz Hirschfeld, a lunatic.—Final order, appointing John A. Stewart Committee of the person and estate. By the papers in this case it appears that Moritz Hirschfeld, who was a merchant and importer of plushes, &c., has been in a declining state of mental health for some years past, and has at length within a year become incompetent to attend to his business. He has in some way been induced to dispose of his entire property, and was placed on board a steamer, and so shipped to Europe, under care of the Captain. A commission of lunacy has been taken out, and the Jury has announced him a lunatic. Mr. Stewart, the Committee, is Secretary of the United States Trust Company.

Suicides.

Last week a large number of suicides occurred in different places. At Waterbury, Conn., a German named Schmidt, took arsenic. Cause, jealousy.... At Vincennes, Ind., Benjamin Mattrix took laudanum. Cause unknown....At Richmond, Ind., Mrs. Elizabeth Burgess threw herself into a cistern. Cause, insanity....At Lewisport, Ky., an Englishman named Brotherton, hung himself. Cause, delirium tremens....At St. Louis, Joseph King, bookkeeper for Henry Dean, took strychnine. Cause, dismissal from employment....At East Boston, Dr. Benjamin R. Bridge took laudanum. Cause, depression of spirits.....At St. Louis, Robert McAlister cut his throat. Cause, loss of property....At Chicago, Mrs. Catharine Schaeffer cut her throat. Cause, hallucination....At Louisville, Ky., A. Irwin Lampton blew out his brains with a revolver, and left a letter addressed to "the Press of Louisville," explanatory of his reasons. He said in this letter that he was "tired of living," and believed in the reality of "a better land."....At Philadelphia, Andrew Aray, 50 years old, hung himself to his bedpost. No cause assigned....In the same city, same day, Lawrence Masherson, a Scotchman, 40 years old, cut his throat. Cause, want of employment....In Baltimore, Wm. G. R. Beale, a young man, shot himself. Cause, temporary insanity.

Miscellaneous.

The corner-stone of the monument to John C. Calhoun, at Charleston, S. C., was laid on the 28th ult. The day was ushered in by the roar of cannon from Fort Moultrie. The civil authorities, the Governor and suite, the Major-General and suite, the different military corps, the fire companies, with a remnant of the Palmettoes, Masons, Odd Fellows, &c., preceded by the ladies of the Calhoun Monument Association, in carriages, assembled at the place of meeting, and, taking up the line of march proceeded to the site of the intended monument.

The Boston Journal says: There will be less traveling and journeying this year from Boston than for a long time previous. Most persons find it difficult to sustain one establishment, much less two—one in city and another in the country or at the seashore—so but few, comparatively, will leave the city this Summer to board or hire houses away. A great many families, this year, probably more than for many years, have moved into the country, finding it impossible for them to pay the rent, or hold their houses, if they owned them.

The Philadelphia Inquirer says: The recent stringency of monetary affairs has caused a decided decline in the price of real estate in almost every section of our City, and rents have also, in many instances, receded. Small stores and moderately large dwelling-houses, in best locations, continue to rent readily, and bring fair prices. The number of houses for sale or to rent is now larger than for twenty years past, and the number is daily increasing.

A new style of railroad car has been introduced on the Central Road, Massachusetts. The engine and cars are attached, separated only by a partition three feet thick. The size of the engine-room is nine by eight feet, and the extreme length of the train 46½ feet. The boiler can be heated with cold water in thirty minutes to eighty pounds steam. The seats in the car are arranged in cabin style, which affords increased standing room.

The number of the Indians in the two provinces of Canada, as far as could be ascertained, is about 8,500 in the Eastern, and 11,500 in the Western, showing a total of nearly 20,000, exclusive of wandering tribes to the north. A majority of the tribes are steadily increasing in numbers, and in nearly all some approaches to civilization have been made, and in a majority of the tribes a part at least are converted to Christianity.

A regatta took place at New-London on the 5th, between New-London and New-Haven rowboats. Fourteen boats were entered for the race. Nine prizes were awarded, of which only two were won by the New-Haven boats. On the same day, another regatta took place at Newburg Bay, on the Hudson, between Newburg and New-York boats. The former came out ahead.

The St. Paul (Minnesota) Pioneer of the 1st inst., says that some two hundred and fifty carts from Pembina, laden with furs, are encamped on the outskirts of that city, and enough others are expected to swell the number to six hundred. Altogether they will bring furs to the value of $50,000. The carts are of the most primitive character, and are drawn by oxen and the stunted ponies of the plains.

The white men attempted to drive out the blacks, and the hostile demonstrations became so serious that the owners of one yard placed all their property under the protection of the city authorities, and closed up.

The annual Convention of the Sigma Phi Fraternity will be held at Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., on Tuesday, July 20, at 2 o'clock P. M. The Rev. M. L. R. P. Thompson, D. D., of Buffalo, will deliver the address, and the Rev. A. C. Kendrick D. D., of Rochester, the Poem.

The Massachusetts Medical Society offers a prize of $100 for the best dissertation adjudged worthy of a prize on the following theme, viz: "To what affection of the lungs does bronchitis give origin?" It is open to physicians of all countries.

More crevasses have occurred near New-Orleans. One opened, on the 29th ult., at Labdell's store, and another opposite the city, a mile and a half above the plantation of Mr. Bell, which has already suffered severely.

On Tuesday, 29th ult., water was let through the entire length of the Hydraulic Canal at Niagara Falls. The contest between Allen and Day continues, and the latter is endeavoring, but without success thus far, to prevent the letting in of the water.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

At last accounts from Newfoundland, there were still no indications of the Atlantic Telegraph fleet. Nearly a month has now elapsed since the sailing of the vessels engaged in the enterprise.

The Cunard mail steamer Africa arrived at Jersey City yesterday morning. Her advices are to the 26th ult. from Liverpool. The debates in Parliament are deficient in general interest, the leading topic being the explanations of Lord MALMESBURY touching the case of the Regina Cœli. The tone assumed by the Foreign Secretary on that occasion, has given much offence to the French Press, who contrast it with the deferential treatment of the American reclamations on the right of search. An article in the Constitutionnel, under implied official authority, is especially furious. The Conferences at Paris had been suspended on account of the illness of the Turkish Envoy. Mr. JOHN BRIGHT had taken occasion upon the second reading of the India Bill to give his views on India affairs at great length. The boldness and peculiarity of his views engaged the free criticism of the London Press. We give a detailed account of the mal-treatment of Mr. DOD, a Missionary of the American Board in Syria. The case is one of singular interest.

A meeting of the Republican State Committee was held at Albany yesterday, at which it was resolved to call a State Convention of two delegates from each district, to meet at Syracuse on the 8th of September. The session was quite an excited one, the struggle being between those desiring the election of but one delegate from each district and those desiring the election of two. The latter, understood to be opposed to the Albany Evening Journal, finally prevailed, after a debate of upwards of two hours.

The steamer Ericsson, with the Seventh Regiment on board, met with another mishap yesterday. When within about eighty miles of Washington, at 6 o'clock A. M., she ran aground. A steamer was sent to take off the regiment, and it was expected they would reach the city about midnight. They will probably visit Mount Vernon to-day.

We publish in full this morning a decision of Judge BETTS, in the U. S. District Court for this District, in the case of the schooner Coernine, which is of much interest and importance to all owners of ships, and all our merchants who furnish materials or supplies in this port to vessels from every State in the Union. These material men have until lately considered that they have had liens upon the vessels for these claims, and under the decisions of such Judges as STORY, WARE, NELSON, BETTS and others, such liens have been enforced in admiralty in the District Courts times without number. It is not going beyond bounds to say that nearly half the actions brought in the District Court in this District for the last ten years have been such cases, as well as a large proportion of those decided by Judge NELSON on appeal to the Circuit Court. The late decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court, in the case of PRATT vs. REED and the People's Ferry Company vs. BEERS, it has been feared, had overturned entirely this well-settled branch of law. But those cases did not exactly appear to cover the whole ground, and the views taken of them by the other Courts have been looked for with interest. This case of the Coernine is the first one in which the extent of those decisions has been brought in question, before Judge BETTS. It will be seen that he considers them as having overthrown entirely the jurisdiction of the Court in these cases for supplies, which has been so often exercised, so that henceforth merchants who supply the necessities of foreign vessels here, need not think of libeling them for their claims, but must trust their owners exclusively or have the cash on delivery of the goods. What the effect of these decisions will be upon the numerous judicial sales of vessels which have taken place in such cases, remains yet to be seen.

The examination of CHAUNCEY R. JUMP, a policeman of the Twenty-first Precinct, before U. S. Commissioner STILWELL, on a charge of passing counterfeit coin was concluded yesterday, and resulted in JUMP'S acquittal from the charge. It appeared in evidence that JUMP had been apparently mixed up with one Dr. MAIGS, in the passing of bogus coin. JUMP admitted having the coin in his possession, but alleged that this was part of his plan for ferreting out certain counterfeiters, and obtaining the necessary proof for their arrest; in this process however he imprudently withheld the proper report of his doings from the officer in command, for fear that he would lose the credit, and, perhaps, the profit of bringing the guilty parties to justice. Meantime MAIGS, as it appears, finding he was implicated, became an informant against JUMP, who was himself arrested, thrown into prison, and suspended from the police until a decision should be had in his case. The U. S. Commissioner was satisfied that there was no proof against JUMP, and gave him a certificate to that effect. The unlucky policeman has applied to be reinstated.

Yesterday, in the Court of General Sessions, WILLIAM HILTON, indicted for assault and battery, was tried before Judge RUSSELL, who is also himself indicted for assault and battery, and convicted. He was an old offender, and sentenced to four years and ten months in the State Prison. Counsel for WM. MULLIGAN, charged with an assault and battery on Mr. WEBB, of the San Francisco Vigilance Committee, at the Metropolitan Hotel, appeared in Court, and stated that Mr. MULLIGAN was unable to appear in the District Attorney's Office, when Mr. WEBB'S testimony was to be taken de bene esse, and consequently that testimony could not be taken. The Court held that as MULLIGAN could have appeared if he chose, his failure to appear rendered it imperative on the Court to order his trial for to-day, (Friday,) when, perhaps, unless there are any more successful quibbles in the matter, he will be tried.

BILLY MULLIGAN, the exiled Californian, who is to be tried to-day before the General Sessions, for his recent assault upon HIRAM N. WEBB, Esq., of the San Francisco Vigilance Company, gave bail yesterday in $1,000, to answer an assault made the evening previous upon a Mr. JAMES F. WARREN. MULLIGAN met WARREN walking with an old flame of MULLIGAN'S in Broadway. MULLIGAN couldn't stand that, and at once knocked his rival to the pavement. The assault seems to have been entirely unprovoked and cowardly.

The case of Capt. DE RIVIERE presented some new features yesterday. He waived the examination on the charge of larceny by giving bail. He was subsequently served with a writ of habeas corpus, and had an old board bill for himself and wife presented for payment, which throws some light on his antecedents.

The Commissioners of Health met on Thursday in the City Hall. In reference to the ship Susanna, recently arrived from Matanzas, it was decided to permit her and also the Grotto, from Sagua la Grande, to proceed on their voyages after one week's detention at Quarantine, provided the persons on board should not be in the meantime taken sick with fever.

The Empire State resumes her place to-day on the Fall River line. She has been four months in the hands of the mechanics, and has undergone the most thorough overhauling, and at an expense of more than $70,000.

Yesterday, 1,800 bales cotton, including 1,000 bales in transitu, were sold at very firm prices. Flour was in fair demand at uniform rates. No important change occurred in sound wheat, corn, or rye, each of which was in good request. Oats were advancing. Pork was less active and prices were irregular. Other kinds of provisions exhibited no really new feature. The auction sale of Santos and Rio coffee resulted in the disposal of all that was offered at firmer prices. Sugars and molasses were more sought after. Freights were moderately active.

Mr. John Bright upon India.

If the world were governed according to the ideas of Mr. BRIGHT and his Manchester friends, the most sanguine dreams of the millennarian would be realized, but then a world of millenarian saints would be required to realize them. The reign of peace principles will only be supreme when the bulk of mankind are pacific; the era of good-will may be anticipated when all men will and do good. The fault of the Bright school of politicians lies in their erroneous belief that mankind is already prepared for the practical exhibition of principles which, while undoubtedly the most salutary for mankind, require an entire revolution of human nature to render them practicable. They propose to introduce the régime of heaven upon earth, while the earth still struggles under influences of the opposite region. The absurdity of insisting upon a wild Southdown lamb of the present day lying down beside the fierce South African monster, his cotemporary, is too patent to escape any but the extreme enthusiast and visionary. It does entirely escape Mr. BRIGHT and his friends.

The discussion of the India bill, introduced by the Derby Ministry, has procured an evolution of this Manchester system of opinions. Mr. BRIGHT has applied his scheme to the case of India. He recognizes and states with admirable distinctness the errors of British Government in the Peninsula, estimates not unfairly the difficulties to be encountered in correcting them, and then brings his doctrines to bear upon the case. His first measure in the order of time is a general amnesty. This is to be immediate. Of the propriety of an amnesty under circumstances that might be conceived, there can be no manner of doubt. Were the rebels of India totally subdued—were the claims of British authority completely vindicated—were there such promise of better days in the admistration of Government, of justice, of military affairs, of taxation, as to induce that vast population to believe in the entire redress of their monstrous grievances, then it would be well to pass an act of oblivion. But at no period of the rebellion has the success of British arms in subduing the insurgents looked more gloomy. The mutineer may at this moment reasonably view his prospects of eventual triumph with entire complacency. To carry to the presumptive victor the olive branch which Mr. BRIGHT is ready to thrust alike into the hands of doubtful friends and declared foes, would be an acknowledgment of weakness against the moral effect of which the British rule could not subsist a month, and which would dispense with all the subsequent prescriptions of the confiding doctrinaire. The next step in Mr. BRIGHT'S plan, is the abolition of the general government of India, and a division of the Peninsula into five wholly independent Presidencies, with separate military establishments. These Presidencies Mr. BRIGHT proposes to keep in intimate correspondence with the home Government, through frequent reports, and daily telegraphic dispatches. And here his outline of the working machinery terminates; and we end in a new principle, which is offered as a substitute for those which have heretofore controlled the Indian Administration. Govern the people of India for their own advantage, and look for a return in the eventual grandeur of a regenerated people. Surely Mr. BRIGHT fails to see what time o' day is marked on the world's dial. He is under the hallucination that the good time coming has already come. It is certainly just, so just, indeed, as to partake of the godlike, to propose that England indemnify the wrong she has wrought upon India, by some centuries of compensated but gratuitous labors in the path of honesty and good government. Magnanimity could aim at no higher mark than such a career of national self-denial and restitution. But has Mr. BRIGHT the remotest idea that the English Government or people, or that any people or government in the world, could be brought to act upon such principles of knight-errantry? A firm believer in an economical system, which rests all social questions upon self-interest and immediate results, with what consistency can the Manchester school propose to except the Government of India, that mine of self-interest and instant profits, from their comprehensive scheme?

After careful examination of the suggestions put forth by Mr. BRIGHT, we can discover no one that meets the exigencies of the case. The English rule in India is on the verge of ruin. The question is, not how to save it, but is it worth saving? What is its salvation worth to the Government of Great Britain? Nothing; for the cost of the Indian Government exceeds the resources supplied by the severest taxation on the face of the earth; and a debt is steadily accumulating. What is its salvation worth to the people of India? Less than nothing; for it exists only to plunder, wrong, and oppress; it does nothing for social developments; nothing for public improvements, or industrial encouragement; nothing for the elevation and civilization of the masses. It exposes one sixty-fourth part of the population of the globe to the most utter misgovernment witnessed since the era of Roman proconsulates; it does so at an expense which impoverishes the laborer, and blights the soil. The only parties benefited are the civil officials dispatched from England to aid in the work of mal-administration, who return gorged with the results of peculation. The true question, in every sensible point of view, is, how can England best extricate herself from this position of profitless responsibility, and do justice alone to India and to herself? And the true answer, the one we certainly should have had from a statesman of Mr. BRIGHT'S philanthropic dispositions, is, let the attempt to govern India politically be abandoned at once and finally; and in its stead cultivate the most intimate and friendly commercial relations. The act would not only be just, but its reward splendid.

MULLIGAN TO BE TRIED.—We are most happy to learn that Judge RUSSELL has reviewed his decision in the case of BILLY MULLIGAN, and determined to try that disturber of the public peace at the present term, instead of deferring it until September. We presume that no one will be disposed to question the propriety of Judge RUSSELL'S continuing to discharge the functions of his office, even though he is under an indictment himself, while he sits on the trial of such persons as Mr. MULLIGAN. If he had appeared yesterday and allowed the testimony of Mr. WEBB to be taken de bene esse, the trial would have been put off until September.

Another Rodgers in the Field.

On Monday last another brutal murder was perpetrated, in all its incidents almost precisely similar to that perpetrated a few months ago upon SWANSTON by the boy RODGERS. A party of drunken rowdies, armed, as usual, is roving the streets, intent upon mischief. One of them, named DONNELLY, sees a Mr. LEISLEY standing peaceably at the door of his own house, selects him as a victim, and, without any provocation, rushes up and stabs him to the heart. We find he was immediately arrested, and the citizens, as usual, were indignant, and wanted to lynch him, and so forth. But this affords us no consolation; the arrest of criminals in the present state of the law is a poor farce. We shall be treated a month hence once more to the old tomfoolery. Juries will be formed with difficulty, and disagree as fast as they are formed. Writs of error will be moved for, appeals taken, new trials granted, and the proceeding will drag its slow length along, until the public is sick of it, and the criminal escapes with two or three years' imprisonment. About the merits of these cases there is never any dispute. The murder in this, as in RODGERS' case, is undeniable; but justice is defeated by legal quibbles, by the blunders of Judges, and by the disgraceful ambiguity and want of clearness of statutes regulating criminal procedure. We have said so much on this question that we might fairly, as far as duty is concerned, henceforward hold our tongues; but it is of such vast and overwhelming importance that the lives of the peaceable and innocent should be somehow protected from the knives of the beastly, drunken rabble who swarm in our streets, the disgrace of our civilization, that we are impelled to harp on the string till something be done. It is bad enough that, in spite of our schools and churches, such an enormous number of young men, from fifteen to twenty, should be given over to drunkenness and crime, but it is worse still that the law should offer no safeguard against their brutal passions or bloody weapons. If public sentiment be decidedly against the infliction of death on such culprits as RODGERS and DONNELLY, let us by all means abolish it and substitute something else; let us do anything to do away with uncertainty and delay, to make jurors faithful to their oaths, and prevent politicians from interfering with the course of the law. Is there no man in the City with the requisite qualifications of learning and character, to make the reform of our administration of criminal justice the work of his life? Is the bar of New-York so irremediably given over to money-making, political "pow wows" and stump speeches, that there is nobody in its ranks to tread in the steps of ROMILLY, or HORNER, or BROUGHAM? There are surely as honorable laurels to be won in protecting the lives of the peaceful, as in using quibbles, quiddets and quirks to save murderers from the gallows.

Proposed New Tariff in Canada.

No little feeling is raised in Canada, just at present, by a new tariff introduced into the Provincial Parliament by Mr. Attorney-General CAYLEY. The bill proposes to afford greater protection to home industry, though in this respect it does not go far enough to suit the leading protectionists, at whose head stands Mr. ISAAC BUCHANAN, the member from Hamilton, while the free-trade men are of course opposed to its provisions. Mr. BUCHANAN, although at first disposed to support the measure, has written a letter withdrawing his support, and claiming a still higher schedule as necessary to the prosperity of Canada, which province, he says, is now plunged into "unparalleled distress."

As the changes proposed will, if effected, have an important bearing upon our large trade with Canada, we print in another part of this paper Mr. CAYLEY'S schedule of duties. The alterations contemplated cannot, of course, affect the articles covered by the Reciprocity arrangement; but it must be borne in mind that only a small portion of our Canadian commerce is included in the list made free by that treaty. The balance is left, as before, subject to any tariff the Provincial authorities may see fit to adopt, and the tariff now under discussion has for its main object the reduction of imports from the United States.

In the diversity of sentiment which prevails it is by no means certain that Mr. CAYLEY'S project will pass, or that any new plan can be adopted; but that there is a strong disposition among the Canadians to lessen their imports from the States, is sufficiently manifest.

Judge Culver's Case.

We give considerable room, this morning, to a full report of the proceedings of a Council, called by Judge CULVER and sixty-two other members of the First Baptist Church of Williamsburg, in relation to the Judge's late expulsion from that Church. The scandal has been very widely discussed, and interests very large numbers of people. The Council worked hard and finished the whole matter in a session which began after noon, and ended about midnight of Wednesday last. The Secretary—the Rev. Mr. REMINGTON, of the Bedford-avenue Baptist Church—yesterday, formally and publicly announced to the Judge that the Council had unanimously concluded that the Church refused him (Judge CULVER) a copy of the charges against him when requested—refused to give the accused parties the names of their accusers, or a copy of the charges against them, or to allow the accused to be present at the examination of witnesses, and refused to allow the Judge to produce witnesses in his defence; and that by resolution the Council had agreed that nothing had come before it against the characters of Judge CULVER or Mrs. BROWN which should prevent any other Baptist Church from receiving them into fellowship. Of course, this did not restore the expelled parties to the Church; but it does all that any Council could do towards reinstating them in the confidence of the public, and throws upon the Church the necessity of proving that its action in the case was not unjust and cruel.

VACANCY IN THE OFFICE OF CANAL COMMISSIONER.—The death of the Hon. S. S WHALLON makes a vacancy, which it devolves upon the Governor to fill. Mr. WHALLON'S term of three years would expire on the last day of December next, and consequently the person appointed in his place will hold the office till that date.

The deceased Commissioner had special charge of the Western Division, commencing at Montezuma, and including the Erie Canal west of that point, together with the Genesee Valley Canal.

As only a third part of the navigation season has expired, it is important that a speed appointment should be made, and the selection of a proper person is manifestly a matter not free from delicacy and difficulty.

At the ensuing November election, a Commissioner will be chosen for the regular term succeeding that of Mr. WHALLON.

The provision for filling vacancies in the office of Canal Commissioner, is found in an act passed Nov. 13, 1847.

Canal Commissioners should possess, in much larger measure than they usually do, a practical knowledge of their duties. The management of the Canals is a trade which cannot be learned in a day, and many aspire to the Commissionership who have little fitness for the place. An adroit politician may make a good Canal officer; but it is by no means certain that he will.

Missionary Trials in Turkey.

Another of those periodical assaults to which the authority of Turkish law is exposed in the mountains of Syria, is detailed in another column. Mr. DOD and his wife, missionaries of the American Board, had repaired to the vicinity of Mount Lebanon to perfect themselves in the Syriac dialect, employed in that region, with the eventual purpose of assuming active missionary labors under the shadow and among the cedars of Mount Libanus. Taking lodgings at a little inn, in the village of Zahleh, they at once attracted the interest and regard of the population; and, as a consequence, secured the animosity of a Convent of Greek Catholics, and of certain Jesuit Fathers of the Romish Church, who had selected the same evangelical field, and in rival devotion to the Papal See, resolved to expel the Protestant apostle of another hemisphere. After sundry vague threats, and acts of covert hostility, they at last proceeded in a body to the quarters of Mr. DOD, threw his little property—books, furniture and the rest—into the streets, and were on the point of carrying his wife and himself out bodily, when, to save her person from violence, Mr. DOD yielded, and suffered himself to be ejected from the village. He at once proceeded to Beyrout, stated his case to the British Consul, who, it appears, acts ad interim for the United States, and who took the case in hand with praiseworthy energy. He has promised to have the rioters punished; a resolution which the Turkish authorities engage to enforce.

It is worthy of remark that Asiatic Turkey is, of all the world-wide field of missionary effort, the one most obnoxious to persecution and molestation. The evangelist goes among the least enlightened savages of the Polynesian world, and through regions of Asia almost unknown to the secular adventurer, without encountering any other hazards than such as are necessarily incident to the enterprising traveler. His sacred claims secure at least respectful attention and courteous treatment, however lightly his doctrines are estimated. But the Asiatic provinces of Turkey are always dangerous. It was but a few years ago that a party of missionaries, consisting of Mr. DUNMORE and others, were plundered and grossly ill-treated by the Turkish authorities of Diarbekr. Last Winter Mr. DICKSON'S family at Jaffa were mobbed, plundered and one of its members murdered. These incidents were the product of Mussulman bigotry. The case of Mr. DOD, on the contrary, is the result of Christian rivalry in the work of proselytism; and a fresh instance of the audacity of the Greek population of the Ottoman Empire, under the operation of recent indulgences. Under the circumstances, there seems to be a single course for our Government to adopt. The most ample redress should be exacted from the Porte. Guarantees against the recurrences of these acts of violence should be insisted upon. While it may be true that the Ottoman exchequer is empty, it is equally true that vast sums have just been extracted from the vacuum to celebrate the nuptials of the Sultan's children. And while it is certain that it is almost impossible to preserve order among the lawless population of Mount Lebanon, it is a matter of history that the operations of Admiral NAPIER against Beyrout, something less than a score of years ago, had a wonderful efficacy in preserving European subjects and Governments from the results of such license. It is to be hoped no time will be lost in instructing the Minister at Constantinople to use the most cogent remonstrances. The zeal of Secretary CASS for religious toleration abroad may not again find so capital a chance for exercise.

The Indians of Washington Territory.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: I notice in the late advices from Oregon that new difficulties have arisen with the Indians of that country. How much of the report is true remains to be seen. My knowledge of that country induces me to believe that there are some mistakes about the number of Indians engaged in the fight at the attempted crossing of the Snake River by Colonel STEPTOE. The only tribes of Indians mentioned as being engaged in that fight, are the Pelouses and the Snakes. There have not been at any time within the last five years more than sixty warriors of the Pelouse band; and the Snake Indians, I think, would not venture into that part of the country at all. It being the Nez Percés country, and the two tribes, if not at war with each other, have for many years been sworn enemies. There are other and better reasons to doubt that there were anything like fifteen hundred Indian warriors collected at the engagement alluded to. There are not two thousand Indian warriors in both Oregon and Washington Territories east of the Cascade range of mountains; and about twelve hundred of these have always been friendly to the whites, and in no case have they been persuaded to take up arms against them. I allude to the Nez Percés, Spokans and Flat Heads. I trust the Government will bear this in mind before they move many thousand troops to that country. But there is a hint in these late reports well calculated to alarm the people on this side of the mountains, viz: that the Indians of that country have been stirred up by those awful Mormons to make war on the whites. I think this is quite as likely to be true as it is that the Mormons are the sole cause of the late eruption of Mount Vesuvius. It is more than five hundred miles from Salt Lake to Walla Walla, and if the Mormons are not friendly to the people of Oregon or Washington, they have become otherwise very lately.

It is not my intention to trouble you with extended remarks on Indian affairs at this time, but at another time I may do so.

A TRAVELER IN THE WEST.

Our next advices from Washington Territory will, doubtless, confirm the opinions of our correspondent. It is in the last degree improbable that the Pelouses, who muster but eighty warriors, could alone have routed Col. STEPTOE'S command; and the alleged cooperation of the Snakes is evidently apocryphal, as that tribe is located on the frontiers of Utah and Oregon, two hundred miles away. The entire Indian population of Washington, on the east side of the Cascade mountains, where the disaster to Col. STEPTOE is reported to have happened, does not exceed 7,000 men, women and children. Governor STEVENS, in 1853, estimated them at 7,356, and Dr. ANSON DART, Indian Superintendent for Oregon, in 1851, made them 7,103. The number has steadily diminished since those dates. The largest force, therefore, they could set in the field would be less than 1,500, were they all hostile. But as five-sixths of them are friendly to the whites, no army could be mustered strong enough to win the advantage reported.

While upon this topic of Indian affairs in the far West, it may be worth while to notice how decisive an illustration they afford of the extravagance of the present Administration. During the administration of Mr. FILLMORE, the expenses of the Department in Oregon, which then embraced Washington, did not exceed $25,000 a year. The appropriation for the year ending on the 1st inst., was a fraction short of $200,000, without reckoning the cost of military operations, which amounted to $264,000 more. Yet the Indians have declined in number by a ratio readily determined; and their cost to the Federal Government should have declined in equable proportion, had anything like judicious economy been observed. Not only the enhanced outlay on the peace establishment, but the existence of a war with its enormous cost are proofs of inexcusable maladministration, which better counsels, and exact honesty might have avoided. Mr. BUCHANAN and his Cabinet are answerable.

City Items.

THE NEW UNITED STATES COURT BUILDINGS.—The work on these buildings, in Chambers-street, on the site of the old Burton's Theatre, for the purpose of fitting them for the use of the United States Courts, was commenced a week ago last Monday. Mr. CLARKE, the Architect of the Department of the Interior at Washington, came on here and closed the contract for the work with Mr. STANBURY, who has for many years been the repairer of the Custom-House. The amount to be paid for the entire repairs is between $1,600 and $1,700,—the place to be ready by the 1st of September, and to be entirely finished by the 1st of October. The United States District-Attorney, United States Marshal, and the clerks of the Circuit and District Courts will have rooms assigned them in the new buildings. There will also be accommodation for the Grand Jury and for Judges' Chambers. Mr. SEDGWICK is endeavoring to have the Secretary of the Interior to make such arrangements as will accommodate the Library of the Law Institute. There will be two Court rooms, 38x50 feet and 25 feet high. When completed the buildings will be an ornament to that part of the City.

SCHOOL RECEPTIONS.—The pupils of the Girls' and Boys' Grammar School, No. 31, J. J. ANDERSON, Principal, gave their second semi-annual reception at 2 o'clock P. M., yesterday. The school made a fine appearance, and a large number of parents and visitors were present to witness the interesting exercises. Addresses were made by Commissioner TWEED and other school officers. The exercises indicated considerable improvement in the character of the school since the enlargement of the school edifice last season.

The pupils of Mr. FOULKES' Grammar School, No. 45, in the Sixteenth Ward, gave a semi-annual reception to their friends, commencing at 9½ o'clock, yesterday. A large attendance of visitors graced the occasion, and Mr. DELAMATER and other school officers addressed the pupils.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The promised series of Promenade Concerts is announced for Monday evening next, under the direction of Messrs. ANSCHUTZ and MUSARD. The parquet of the Academy will be floored over, in order to afford room for promenades; vases of flowers are to decorate the building, and refreshments are to be furnished as becomes Summer-night festivals. The music is to be of the light order, suitable for hearing of a hot night, and a pleasant programme is laid out. The Promenade Concerts will be just the thing for these sultry evenings.

Some Interesting Things at Boston on the Fifth.

The Celebration of the Fifth in Boston seems to have brought out a variety of famous people. Speeches were made by RUFUS CHOATE, EDWARD EVERETT, Governor BANKS, WM. LLOYD GARRISON and his followers; JOHN S. HOLMES was the City Orator; President BUCHANAN, Senator CRITTENDEN and ROBT. C. WINTHROP, wrote letters, and the proceedings of the day were generally enlivened by a prodigious display of military splendor, fantastical parades of "fast" young men, a regatta, a double balloon ascension, &c. The City Orator, Mr. HOLMES, made a cruel hit at the Garrisonian school of professional philanthropists in the course of his oration. He remarked:

"There are among us men who live upon alarm and terror; who fatten upon public tumult, and find no peace in the still movement of ordinary political life. Take away their power of disturbance, and they would die from want of means of a living, or come as their proper destiny is, to inhabit the madhouse or workhouse. There is no meaner animal than the professed philanthropist, who, under the pretense of feeling for public and political wrong, gathers to himself a good living, and always leaves the objects of his charity as they were, and where they were, as the sentimental capital of his future harvest. And out of this sectional temper of the time, there has arisen a lusty crowd of such partisan philanthropists, who work like rats in the dark, and coadjutant with the selfish politician above ground, live and move to one end—to blindly, foolishly destroy the united, essential power of these broad States. Perhaps such vermin must exist, but let the heel of every honest American be upon their heads."

Mr. EVERETT spoke to the Democracy of the Revere House. He indulged in a bit of personal reminiscence:

"As long as I was in public life, I was a member, as you know, Sir, of that old Whig Party to which you have referred—the national Whig Party; a political association, Sir, I am sure you will grant, of which no one need be ashamed. The prostration of my health compelled me, four years ago, to resign the honorable post which I then filled in the public service. Since that period, new parties have been organized; old ones have either retired for a while, at least, from the field, or have been forced in some degree on new issues; and if I felt the slightest inclination, (which I do not,) with the partial restoration of my health, to return to public life, I should be deterred from it by the fact that between the extremes of opinion which distract and threaten to convulse the country, I find no middle path to practical usefulness which a friend of moderate counsels is permitted to pursue. Statesmanship, as it was understood in my younger days—that is, the study of the foreign relations of the country, its defences, naval and military, its currency and finances, its internal improvements, its great industrial interests, and the relations of the Government to the Indian tribes, has almost become an obsolete idea, and our political life has assumed almost exclusively the form of sectional agitation. Into that dreary and profitless agitation I have no heart to enter."

Mr. EVERETT added:

"For myself, I have found in every part of the country generous traits of character, vast and well-understood capacities of progress, and hopeful auguries of good; and taken in the aggregate, they are the abode of a population as intelligent, as prosperous, as moral and as religious as any to be found on the surface of the globe. There is one little corner of each which I should like to annihilate; if I could wield a magician's wand, I would sink it to the centre. Its name is Buncombe; not the respectable county of that name in North Carolina, against which I have nothing to say, but a pestilent little political electioneering Buncombe in every State and every district, which is the prolific source of most of our troubles. If we could get rid, Sir, of Buncombe, and if we could bring back the harmony which reigned on the day which we celebrate, and the days which preceded and followed it—when Massachusetts summoned WASHINGTON to lead the armies of New-England; when Virginia and Carolina sent their supplies of corn and of rice to feed their famished brethren in Boston; when JEFFERSON and ADAMS joined hands to draft the great Declaration—if I could live to see that happy day, I would, upon my honor, Sir, go to my grave as cheerfully as the tired and contented laborer goes to his nightly rest. I shall, in the course of nature, go to it before long, at any rate, and I wish no other epitaph to be placed upon it than this: "Through evil report, and through good report, he loved his whole country."

Gov. BANKS, having been called out at the City Banquet, also gave a morsel of his own personal history.

"There were many reasons, individual as well as official, why he was pleased to join with the citizens of Boston in the commemoration of this day. He begged leave to say that he helped to build this city himself. In its darkened shops, upon the printing presses and engines which have contributed so much to its glory, he gave the toil of his youth, and were it necessary he could still return to them. Those localities he never passed without emotion. Although subsequently admitted to the profession of the law—of which the orator of the day was so distinguished an ornament—his memory still reverted with pleasure to the days which he passed in those workshops, for there with those who were associated with him, were passed many of the happiest hours of his life."

The Garrisonians held a celebration at South Framingham, which appears to have been a remarkably funny time. After GARRISON had had his say, the violent Mr. PARKER PILLSBURY, who was prominent at the Rutland Convention, defended the character of that miscellaneous assemblage.

"That Convention," he said, "was a gathering larger than the one in which they were then assembled, continuing three days, and a more earnest honest, devoted, liberty-loving, man-loving and God-honoring body of men and women, it had not been his happiness to meet for twenty years."

Mr. WINTHROP'S letter is interesting for a suggestion it contains, to the effect that the 3d of July should be substituted for the 5th, when the 4th falls on Sunday. He adds:

"You are aware that WASHINGTON, having arrived at Cambridge on the 2d, assumed command of the American Army for the first time on the 3d of July, 1775. Would it not be a most agreeable and worthy coincidence, if, when the intervention of a Sunday shall cut off the customary routine of these celebrations, we could combine the commemoration of those two great events—WASHINGTON taking command of the Army in 1775, and Congress declaring our Independence in 1776."

The National Guard at Richmond—Their Final Parade and March—Farewell of Gov. Wise to the Citizens—Pyrotechnics and a bit of Philosophy.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

RICHMOND, Va., Wednesday, July 7.

The Joint Committee of the Common Council which accompanied the remains of Ex-President MONROE to this place, left for Washington this morning. The departure of the Committee was to have taken place yesterday, but a dinner at Gov. WISE'S house, at which the Hon. JOHN COCHRANE, SAMUEL L. GOUVERNEUR, the grandson of MONROE, the Mayor of Richmond, Dr. WOODWARD, N. Y. S. M. and others were present, detained them until it was too late to leave for Washington. The dinner was a social affair, and there was no speech making. The Seventh Regiment sailed for Washington, quite punctually at the hour which I named in my last. During the afternoon, before their departure, they indulged freely in leave-taking—disagreeable duty of which the best friends are compelled at times to partake. Considerable amusement was created in the street which divides the two buildings which constitutes Ballard's hotel—a bridge thrown over the street connects them at the second story, by the performances of a private in the 6th company of the National Guard, familiarly known as Gus. RATZ, who is a noted gymnast. He performed some ludicrous feats on the back of an odd-looking donkey which, with a negro driver, was passing by, and fairly "astonished the natives." Performances which require much muscular exertion at this season of the year are looked upon with amazement in this climate; those of Mr. RATZ, in any season or zone, would have made a passer-by stop to take a second look. At 6 o'clock the companies were mustered at their different quarters, and marched to Capitol-square, which the Colonel had indicated as the place where the line would be formed prior to marching to the boat, about a mile and a half distant. When they were assembled at the Park, looking well, and in fine spirits, they marched and countermarched before the Governor and his officers, who were in front of the line, and performed their manœuvres as one man. The Virginians were highly delighted, and applauded them loudly, especially when they obeyed the orders "Charge Bayonets" and "Order Arms." The ranks were, of course, much fuller than they were at the parade the day before, when many of the men were off duty—engaged in the pleasing occupation, to the curious stranger, which, in New York, is termed "Seeing the elephant." The Richmond quadruped is, by the way, a very fine specimen. The most interesting part of his anatomy, as he grows on this soil, after Gov. WISE and CRAWFORD'S "Washington"—the very trunk and tusks of the animal—are the Cascades, Hollywood Cemetery, the fertile farms on the banks of James River, the quaint little old stone building, which was the first ever built in Richmond, in which WASHINGTON and MONROE, and probably the other giants of the old time in Virginia were entertained in the pre-fossilated period of the existence of those men who could not die, and the historical vicinity of the Cemetery, where POWHATAN held court, and POCAHONTAS saved the life of the man whose name is in every man's mouth almost daily, and occupies several pages of the New-York Directory. Then the new Custom-House, built of Virginia granite, quarried just over the river, greatly attracted the attention of the New-Yorkers, and the large tobacco factories wagged their pig-tails with joy at the honors which, their proprietors conceived, were heaped upon them by the visits of the inquisitive of the Regiment. But the time for departure having arrived, these places were, of necessity, deserted by the latter, and, with the exception of one man from each company detailed to take care of the baggage, probably not a man's voice was missed when Colonel DUNKE proposed three cheers for the Virginians. Six were given with a will, and then the Governor stepping forward addressed the crowd, citizens and soldiery, saying, "The New-York regiment has cheered for us; I propose now that the Virginians salute the New-Yorkers with three times three." The call was responded to heartily. The Regiment then huzzaed for Governor WISE, and when they were silent he stepped forward, and briefly bade them farewell. They of Virginia, he said, had given the regiment a cordial welcome, and he now, on behalf of Virginia, on behalf of the city of Richmond, and for himself individually, bade them farewell. He hoped to see them at Richmond again. The men applauded and cheered him, the drums beat, the officers and regiment saluted him, and then fell into line and marched out of the square. Fireworks were set off in front of the Statue of Washington as they marched out, and along their route down Main-street a mile and a half, Roman candles and rockets were frequently discharged. The whole of the Richmond soldiery preceded them, and at the boat took leave of them with drums beating and arms presented. Nothing occurred to mar the universal good feeling which prvailed between the Virginians and their guests. The results of this visit and of all similar opportunities of greeting and, more than that, of forming acquaintances and friendships between Americans of the North and of the South, must always be gratifying to those who love the Union, and productive of great national good. WASHINGTON, Thursday, July 8.

The steamer Ericsson, with the 7th Regiment National Guard on board, ran aground at 6 o'clock this morning, about 80 miles below Washington. A steamer was sent to their relief. It is expected the regiment will reach here about midnight, and visit Mt. Vernon to-morrow. The District Volunteer Companies, and a detachment of Marines, have been under arms all day waiting their arrival. An invitation has been extended to the regiment to visit Baltimore.

The Canal Board.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your Albany correspondent alludes, in the TIMES of this date, to the course pursued by the Hon. GIDEON J. TUCKER at the last session of the Canal Board, at Albany and in this connection defames and falsely impeaches the character of the Canal officers in this City.

As for the Secretary of State, he can doubtless bear with entire equanimity the charge of having stood up in defence of his friends, the New-York Democratic Canal officers. He has simply restored them to the positions held, and the duties performed, by their Know-Nothing predecessors in office last year. He has taken off the additional, unnecessary and impossible labors imposed upon them, since the first of January past, by the Know-Nothing Auditor. Mr. TUCKER will doubtless leave your correspondent at full liberty to attempt any misrepresentation of his action in this particular which may seem necessary for partisan purposes.

But as to the Canal officers in this City, whom he assails, I accuse him in this of mendacity and inexcusable perversion. They are, one and all, gentlemen of as high standing, personal worth and unimpeachable reputations

The American Ship Canal Company to be Protected by Government—The Treaties With the Western Indians—Utah Affairs—The French Passport System—Public Lands to be Sold, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, July 8.

I learn from a reliable source that President BUCHANAN has determined to protect the American Ship Canal Company in their contract with Nicaragua. The Cabinet advise to this course, and against further temporising, and Costa Rica favors the movement. Instructions are already prepared, and will be forthwith dispatched to Gen. LAMAR, directing him to impress distinctly upon the public authorities of Nicaragua the fact that our policy towards that Republic has been changed, and that remedies against all existing or future evils will be enforced in a summary way. Where's General WILLIAM WALKER?

My dispatch, giving a synopsis of the Indian treaties, created no little stir among the officials here. The wonder is how your correspondent "Q" exhumed treaties which had been so long buried among the secret archives of the Senate. The scalping-knife and tomahawk would have frightened them up again, had I not resurrected them in advance.

The dissection has no doubt spread far and wide, and even reaches the Indians on our more immediate western borders. I learn that every precaution will be taken by the Indian office to avoid and prevent a surprise and general outbreak.

The Administration watches with interest every item of news from Utah. Although the general order, which the TIMES published in advance, makes a redistribution of the Utah army, yet there was a saving clause, and the War Department is by no means certain that General HARNEY will not in the exercise of a sound discretion press onward to Salt Lake Valley.

Our Government, I learn, is by no means pleased with the late stringent regulations of France in regard to visas of Passports. By these regulations, a citizen of the United States, after obtaining a passport from his own Government, is compelled to appear in person before the Diplomatic or Consular Agent in this country, of his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of France, and again identify himself, or he will not be permitted to enter the French territory. The great seal of our Republic has ceased to be sufficient to secure a French visa even within our own borders. In other words, the Imperial edicts of NAPOLEON III. are being daily enforced upon American soil, and our citizens subjected to great inconvenience and expense thereby. It is the intention of the Department of State to enter a protest against the regulations.

Uncle Sam designs using every means in his power to replenish his empty coffers. With this view he has thrown into public market the following small parcels of real estate:

5¼ million acres in.....California
1½ million acres in.....Louisiana
2¼ million acres in.....Nebraska
3 million acres in.....Kansas

Making in round numbers twelve millions of acres, every acre of which, a few years ago, would have been readily taken up at the minimum price, $1 25 per acre. But it is now estimated that not over one-half of the amount thrown into market will be sold during the present fiscal year. Seven millions and a half of dollars will, however, be no inconsiderable relief to a depleted treasury while importations continue light.

The Agricultural Bureau of the Patent Office is making preparations to test the cultivation of tea in this country. The seed will be preserved in China specially for the purpose, planted in glass cases and shipped in October. By the time of their arrival here they will have sufficiently sprouted to be set out in beds. After being tested here, the plants, if successful, will be distributed among the Southern States. An order for a great variety of seeds will also be sent to Egypt in a few days through a house in London. This list includes wheat, barley, rice, clover, (Trifolium Alexandrinum,) &c'. &c. Arrangements are also making to commence a nursery for the growth of ornamental trees for the public grounds in this and other cities. They can be supplied from a public nursery at one twentieth of their present cost. Such is the estimate of the Interior Department.

The Commencement at Georgetown College yesterday, was numerously attended by our distinguished citizens, and the exercises were even more satisfactory than usual. The defence of the "Press," by J. O'FLYNN, of Michigan, and "The Poetry of Life,' by CHARLES B. KENNY, of Pennsylvania, were compositions of rare beauty and power. Father B. H. MCGUIRE announced his expectation of relinquishing the Presidency of this ancient seat of learning.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Thursday, July 8.

It appears from the army orders just issued, that within the past year there have been 54 promotions, 13 resignations, 16 deaths and 36 appointments, including those of 26 cadets to Brevet Second-Lieutenancies.

Commander ROBB has been ordered, by the Secretary of the Navy, to the Norfolk Navy-Yard, vice Commander FORD, detached and Commander HANDY to the Rendezvous at Boston, in place of Commander WINSLOW, detached.

The War Department is in receipt of dispatches from General JOHNSTON dated the 11th of June. They contain nothing of especial interest. The Army was in good condition. According to the copies of the official orders, the troops were to march forthwith in three divisions, on as many consecutive days, to Salt Lake Valley, in compliance with the instructions of the Government.

Meeting of the Republican State Committee

A STATE CONVENTION TO BE HELD AT SYRACUSE IN SEPTEMBER.

ALBANY, Thursday, July 8.

The Republican State Committee met in this City at noon to-day. A very exciting session was held until nearly 3 P. M. The debate was very warm, the struggle being between those representing the interests of that section of the party desiring the election of but one delegate from each district, and those called independents, who are supposed to be adverse to the Evening Journal, and who wished delegates elected. After a spirited contest the latter prevailed.

On motion of DEWITT C. LITTLEJOHN, a resolution was adopted calling a Convention of two delegates from each district to meet at Syracuse, September 8

The following is the call for the Convention adopted by the Committee:

At a meeting of the Republican State Committee, held at Albany on the 8th day of July, 1858, the 8th day of September was agreed upon as the time for holding the next State Convention, as will be seen by the following notice:

The Republican electors of the State of New-York are requested to choose two delegates from each Assembly District, to meet in State Convention in the city of Syracuse, on Wednesday, the 8th day of September next, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of presenting candidates to be supported for the offices of Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Canal Commissioner and State Prison Inspector, and for transacting such other business as may come before the Convention.

Mr. Douglas at Toledo, Ohio.

TOLEDO, Thursday, July 8.

Hon. S. A DOUGLAS arrived here last evening, and was enthusiastically received by upwards of three thousand citizens, and escorted to his hotel amid the firing of cannons, bands of music, &c. He was addressed on behalf of the citizens by D. O. MORROW, to which Mr DOUGLAS responded in a happy manner. A great display of fire-works concluded the festivities. It was one of the greatest demonstrations which ever took place in this city.

Large Fire at Fond du Lac, Wis.

MILWAUKEE, Thursday, July 8.

The de Riviere Scandal—Letter from Mrs. Blount—The Captain Gives Bail and Declines an Examination He is Served with a Habeas Corpus and a Dun.

The scandalous romance of Capt. DE RIVIERE and the BLOUNTS, mother and daughter, continues to enliven the shades of Hoboken, and the Hotel Napoleon is besieged by a crowd of curious visitors. As was expected, the Captain declined the preliminary examination yesterday, on the charge of larceny preferred by Col. BLOUNT, and gave bail in the sum of $1,000 to await the action of the Grand Jury in October. FRANK MCDONOUGH, the Chief of Police, of Hoboken, who has DE RIVIERE in custody, became his surety. The Captain continues at the Hotel Napoleon, and says he has resolved to make Hoboken his residence, and has taken steps to become a naturalized citizen. Mrs. BLOUNT also remains at the hotel, and appears to be much annoyed by the notoriety she has acquired, and complains of the magnified statements, purporting to come from her, which have appeared in some of the papers, and particularly of the publication of a private letter from her daughter, which she can hardly believe was obtained by the permission of Captain DE RIVIERE. As for Miss BLOUNT, the heroine of the romance, her whereabouts has not yet been discovered. It is certain that she is not at the Hotel Napoleon with her mother, and it is equally certain that those who know her place of concealment, including DE RIVIERE—who, judging from the free use he makes of her letters, is leaky enough—are determined to keep the matter secret for the present.

The only new feature that presented itself yesterday with reference to the legal aspect of the case was the issuing of two writs of habeas corpus by Judge OGDEN, one directed to the proprietor of the Hotel Napoleon, and the other to Capt DE RIVIELE. The following is a copy of the document:

New Jersey, ss.—The State of New-Jersey to JOHN HUNKIE and HENRY DE RIVIERE, of the county of Hudson, greeting:

We command you that you have the bodies of Mrs. EMILY J. BLOUNT and Miss EMILY J. BLOUNT, wife and daughter of FREDERICK S. BLOUNT, under your custody or the custody of some or one of you, and detained by you from said FREDERICK S BLOUNT as is said under safe and sure conduct, together with the day and cause of their being by you detained before his honor ELIAS B. D. OGDEN, one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of Judication of New-Jersey, at the Court-House in the city of Hudson, in the county of Hudson, on the ninth day of July instant, at the hour of nine in the forenoon of that day to do and receive all and singular those things which our said Justice shall then and there consider of them in this behalf. And have you then and there this writ.

Witness his honor ELIAS B D. OGDEN, Justice of our Supreme Court aforesaid, at Tronton, this eighth day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand hundred and fifty-eighth.

CHAS. P. SMITH, Clerk.

RANSON and BROWNE, Attorneys.

The writs were obtained on the affidavit of Colonel BLOUNT, after it was found that Capt. DE RIVIERE had given bail on the charge of larceny, and were served yesterday afternoon. This proceeding, like the previous action taken by the unfortunate Col. BLOUNT to recover possession of his wife and daughter, will probably prove abortive; as our reporter was informed by the attorneys for the parties, that the return will contain a full and explicit denial by Capt. DE RIVIERE and MONSIEUR HUNKIE, of any attempt at coercion, imprisonment, custody, or detention of the parties, past or present; and further, that as to Mrs. BLOUNT, she remains at the Hotel Napoleon of her own free will and accord, and intends to remain there until she has taken steps to procure a separation from her husband, whom she declares she will never live with again.

The following curious and suggestive letter we have received from Mrs. BLOUNT:

LETTER FROM MRS. COL. BLOUNT.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Thursday, July 8, 1858.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

My name and that of my daughter have been so often before the public during the past few weeks, not only in scraps of so-called news, but in editorial articles of greater or less length, based, of course, by whomever written, on the one-sided statements of my husband, Col. BLOUNT, up to this time uncontradicted by me, and upon papers which he is pleased to term "documentary evidence," trumped up and shown or caused to be shown by him to the gentlemen of the Press, that I feel I shall be compelled to give to the public, although reluctantly, my own version of this sad affair. Persistent silence on my part, under the circumstances, would naturally be regarded as a negative admission by me of the correctness of the false statements which Colonel BLOUNT has thought proper to cause to be printed, reflecting upon me, his wife, my dear child, and oh! if he could only see it—on himself.

As for myself, I assure you, Sir, that I should not put myself to the trouble of writing a single line in my own defence—not that I am indifferent to the opinion of my friends, but that I know their opinion of me to be based upon too solid a foundation to be shaken by the attacks of Colonel BLOUNT. It would be as ridiculous for me to deny to those who have known me from girlhood the truth of Colonel BLOUNT's statements, as for you, Sir, to write a grave and labored denial of a charge of petty larceny brought against you by some wrong headed political opponent, without even a shadow upon which to base his senseless accusation.

I repeat, Sir, that it is not necessary for me to justify myself to my friends; and my instincts, my education, my tastes and my associations as an American lady, all combine to make me shrink from obtruding purely personal matters on the public; but my love for my dear child, and my sense of what I conceive to be my duty to her, compared to which in strength and intensity all the other elements of my being are as mustard-seed to a mountain, impel me to ask through the columns of your paper for a suspension of public opinion until after my side of the story shall have been heard.

With your permission, Mr. Editor, I will in a few days, (as soon as my health and strength will permit,) prepare for your paper a detailed account of this unfortunate case, from the time Captain DE RIVIERE was first introduced into our family in Mobile up to the hour of my writing. In the meantime, Sir, may I beg to be relieved from the incessant solicitations for interviews with which I am beset by reporters for the Press. Such of these young gentlemen as I have chosen to see were polite and respectful; but, although well meaning, they are sometimes careless, and do irreparable injury, unintentional, of course, but none the less effectively. Altogether, the youth of these gentlemen, and the immaturity of their experience, render them undesirable persons for me to converse with on subjects so delicate as those involved in this case. I do not, indeed, wish to see any one until after my statement shall have appeared.

Persons of whatever mental calibre, who have read only Col. BLOUNT's statements, must, I know, be more or less prejudiced against me. I do not, therefore, wish to see any one under such a disadvantage. After I shall have made my statement, Col. BLOUNT and I will be on an equal footing, and then, if any of the responsible editors of the daily papers choose to call upon me, and see for themselves, whether or not I have what Col. BLOUNT singularly denominates a "mental distemper" I shall be most happy to see them. With great respect, E. J. BLOUNT.

THE CAPTAIN SERVED WITH A NEW PROCESS.

While the chivalrous Captain sat in his parlor cogitating upon the above writ of habeas corpus, and other weighty matters growing out of his romantic attachment, his privacy was intruded upon by the following vulgar document, emanating from EVERETH & BISSELL, Attorneys, No. 60 Wall-street:

BROOKLYN, E. D., Wednesday, July 7, 1857.

Capt. HENRI ARNOUX DE RIVIERE

To S. D. GOODNOW, Proprietor of the Wall House, Fourth-street, Williamsburg, Dr.

To board and lodging for self and wife to date, $226 50
Received payment.

This, to be sure, was rather a shabby document to thrust under the nose of a man who was engaged in Cupidian contemplations upon "the course of true love," but, nevertheless, the Captain took it coolly—so coolly, indeed, that he forgot to return an answer, and when the bearer of the dispatch asked for an interview with the Captain, he was told by the servant that the Captain had just left the hotel by the side door.

On making inquiries relative to the above bill, our reporter was informed that on his first arrival in this country, in February, 1857, Capt. DE RIVIERE, with his wife, put up at the "Wall House," in Williamsburg, being recommended thereto by the surgeon of the vessel in which they came over, (they came in a sailing vessel,) who was an acquaintance of Mr. GOODNOW, the proprietor of the house. They continued there until the 7th of July, when DE RIVIERE returned to Europe on a visit, leaving his wife still at the hotel. On his departure he gave Mr. GOODNOW a draft on a house in London, for the amount due at hat date, which draft was immediately returned, protested, with the intimation that Capt. HENRI ARNOUX DE RIVIERE kept no account at that establishment. The Captain's wife continued at the hotel some six weeks after her husband left, when she too sailed for Europe. Mr. GOODNOW states that while residing at his house, they represented themselves as man and wife, and that Capt. RIVIERE has often stated to him, and to his son, the particulars of his marriage in France,—giving dates, locality, &c. He exhibited to our reporter a letter written to him by Capt. DE RIVIERE, while the latter was on a trip to the West, of which the following is a verbatim copy:

BUFFALO, Friday, May 8, 1857.

DEAR SIR: I received a note to-day, which obliges me to remain longer than I thought at first absent from New-York. Perhaps I will go to Chicago before I return, and that may last one month. I am in a great anxiety about my wife's health, and I pray you, Sir, to write me a circumstantial letter including the doctor's advice. It is very important for me as it would change all my prospects. There is nothing important enough to enter in consideration with my wife's health, and I should immediately return if there was the least danger.

I should also be thankful to you, Sir, for the note of the money I owe you presently, as I want to send it by post before I return.

I shall expect your answer, and wait for it with great impatience. I am, Sir, truly yours,

Capt. H. A. DE RIVIÈRE.

Mr. GOODNOW states that while they were residing at his house a rumor got into circulation that the woman living with Captain DE RIVIERE was his mistress, and not his wife; that DE RIVIERE on hearing it became greatly enraged, and threatened to shoot any man who should repeat it. That finally, to silence the scandal, he came over to New-York, and had the marriage ceremony repeated in Canal-street, and that this was the marriage alluded to in Captain DE RIVIERE's letter to the public. Mr. GOODNOW has several other letters in his possession from Captain DE RIVIERE, in all of which he speaks of his wife in the most affectionate terms.

"Affairs of Honor."

DUEL BETWEEN ST. LOUIS DOCTORS.

The St. Louis Republican says:

"A correspondence was published in this paper, some days since, having in contemplation a duel between Dr. WALKER and Dr. M. A. PALLEN. From the tenor of the last letter it was inferred that no meeting would take place. But the correspondence, it is understood, was reopened, by the avowal, on the part of Dr. WALKER, of his readiness to accept the challenge of Dr. PALLEN, and his appointment of Dr. DRAKE MCDOWELL to arrange preliminaries. The meeting was arranged to take place in the neighborhood of Cahokia, Illinois, and the principals and their friends repaired to Papstown, Illinois, on Saturday, where they were to remain until the time appointed for the duel. All the details were set down—rifles, fifty paces, wheel and fire—the ground measured, &c. Meanwhile, Dr. HAMMER had gone before Justice HERCKENRATH and on his oath procured a warrant for the arrest of all the parties concerned. Such a warrant was of no use in Illinois, but it was not without its virtue; for Dr. DRAKE MCDOWELL returned to this city Saturday evening, and the police soon arrested him. Of course the duel could not go on without a friend of Dr. WALKER being present, and at that late hour Mr. BAERETT was informed to that effect. But Justice HERCKENRATH was not inactive, and about one o'clock of Sunday morning, he, in company with two policemen, succeeded in finding the parties at their temporary locality, arrested them on their own authority, and brought them to this city. Being here, the law was made to operate upon them, and they were held in sums of $2,000 each, to keep the peace, which being given they were discharged.

THE EDITORIAL DUEL AT NEW ORLEANS.

From the N. O. Bee, 30th ult.

A hostile meeting occurred yesterday afternoon, at 1 o'clock, on Metairie Ridge, with pistols, at twelve paces, between Messrs. ISRAEL GIBBONS Reporter of the Crescent, and JOSEPH HANLON, Reporter of the True Delta. The second of the former was Mr. FRANK BARRETT; that of the latter was Col. MCDONALD, of Mobile. At the first fire Mr. GIBBONS was shot through the upper part of the right lung, the ball passing out through his back. Mr. HANLON was untouched, though, being near-sighted, he did not fire until after his antagonist The wound of Mr. GIBBONS was regarded as so dangerous that he could not be removed until a litter was procured, when he was conveyed to his residence, in the Third District.

The cause of the difficulty we believe to be as follows: Both gentlemen were engaged in reporting for their respective papers at the Girls' High School examination, in Rampart street, last Saturday, when, after the delivery of the original compositions by some of the young ladies, Mr HANLON asked for and obtained from the Principal the manuscript of some of the compositions for publication. Mr. GIBBONS, on applying afterwards, could not obtain them, and charged Mr. HANLON with having taken an undue advantage, or with having stolen the papers.

Mr. HANLON supposed the remark to be made in a joking way, and so received it at the time; but finding that Mr. GIBBONS did not recognize him, on meeting afterwards on several occasions, addressed a note to Mr. G., by the hands of a friend, asking if he intended his remark as serious. The reply being that it was so meant, a challenge was immediately sent and accepted—the serious result we have already stated. We learned last evening that Mr. GIBBONS' physician pronounced his wound a mortal one.

REGATTA AT NEWBURG.—The Newburg people having caught the regatta infection, and not being favorably situated for sailing, tried their hand at rowing on Monday last, and had an exciting race among the skiffs and fishing boats. The race began at 2 P. M., the distance being 5¼ miles. It was won by Factory Belle, of Newburg. The second race between four-oared boats, the first prize being $100, and the second, $25. The Wood won the race by 47 seconds. The third race was between two pair of scull boats, same prizes; Gazeby won. The Rappahannock broke in two, and came near drowning her men. The fourth race, by a single pair of sculls, $50 and $25 prizes. Seven boats entered. James Underhill won by 48 seconds.

THE INCREASED USE OF WING'S FARINA CRACKERS, with the commendatory remarks of parents, teachers and physicians, as well as many persons in various positions in life, whose powers have been more or less weakened by sedentary habits or occupation, is strong proof of the healthful and beneficial results which have attended their use.

Their great nourishing properties, and the ease with which the stomach digests this pleasant food, are well established, and there can be, on testing them, no doubt of this fact, viz.: that the same weight of WING'S CRACKERS will make more good blood, and act more kindly upon the delicate texture of the stomach than anything else ever introduced in this or any other form of bread.

All true Farina Crackers have the name of A. WING stamped on them, and those wishing to buy should ask for WING'S CRACKERS.

They may be had of the best family grocers generally, and at wholesale only of A. N. THOMPSON & CO., Nos. 221 and 223 Fulton st., New-York.

SILVER WARE.

BALL, BLACK & CO. invite special attention to their stock of silver ware, which is now unusually large, including a variety of pattern and design surpassing any to be found in any house in the United States, and of finer quality than is manufactured in any part of the world.

OUR STANDARD of silver is.....900-1,000 parts pure.
The English sterling silver is.....925-1,000 parts pure.
The American and French coin is....900-1,000 parts pure.

Thus, it will be seen, that we give 50 parts purer than the American and French coin, and 25 parts purer than the English sterling. We manufacture our own silver ware, and, therefore, guarantee the quality as above, which is the finest that can be made, to be serviceable.

INSURANCE.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....$500,000.
SURPLUS, OVER.....$250,000.

Office, Nos. 113 and 114 Broadway.

The officers of this Company take satisfaction in announcing to its patrons, and the business community generally, that the principle for which they have always contended has been conceded by their associate underwriters of this City, and that merchants and others requiring insurance need be assessed no longer to support the unnecessary system of brokerage in Fire Insurance. The system they have always considered as an evil, and have acted accordingly, maintaining that if the existing rates of premium would warrant the companies in allowing a return of a portion of the same as a commission to a broker, the insured were entitled to such reduction.

Special notice is, therefore, now given that this Company is prepared to return to the assured, direct FIVE per cent. of the amount of premium on all policies issued at the current rates on property in the cities of New-York, Brooklyn, Jersey City and Hoboken.

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
A. F. WILLMARTH, Vice-President.
J. MILTON SMITH, Secretary.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Weather Report for June.

The notations were made daily at 6 o'clock, A. M., and also on the warmest days at the time of extreme heat; the thermometer hanging on the northerly side of the main building of Bloomingdale Asylum, which stands on high ground at One Hundred and Seventeenth street, between the Tenth and Eleventh avenues:

June.	6. A. M.	June.	6. A. M.
1	56°	16	58°
2	60°	17	60°
3	62°	18	63°
4	63°	19	73°
5	66°-81° at 12 M.	20	71°-84° at 3 P. M.
6	71°	21	74°-86° at 3 P. M.
7	70°	22	66°
8	75°-82° at 3 P. M.	23	65°
9	66°-80° at 2 P. M.	24	68°-81° at 3 P. M.
10	66°-84° at 2½ P. M.	25	75°-87° at 12 M.
11	77°-86° at 3 P. M.	26	79°-91° at 3 P. M.
12	59°	27	78°-90° at 1 P. M.
13	50°	28	79°-80° at 9 A. M.
14	56°	29	76°-86° at 3 P. M.
15	57°	30	78°-86° at 3 P. M.

The average rise of the mercury in each day was about 12°, except on the 12th, when it fell from 59° to 65° by noon.

We have all, probably, been more or less forcibly impressed with two prominent characteristics in the weather of June, viz: A great fall (about 4½ inches) of rain, occurring mostly in two brief periods; and a goodly portion of extreme heat.

During the nights of the 5th, 6th and 9th, and afternoon of the 9th, we had slight showers, in all, about 0·100 of an inch of rain.

The first storm commenced about 3 o'clock P. M., on the 11th, accompanied by heavy thunder, and the rain continued to fall rapidly until the evening of the 12th, which day was cool and very windy.

On this occasion about 4 inches of rain fell, the weather continuing cloudy, without more rain, until the morning of the 17th, which was ushered in with a thick mist, succeeded by a bright sunshine.

On the afternoon of the 21st we had a storm of wind and rain, which has been well described and aptly termed a "tornado." Most of the rain fell in about fifteen minutes, and measured in all nearly 6-10 of an inch. We, however, escaped any material damage from its effects.

The night of the 24th was very oppressive—a very sleepless time generally. The nights of the 26th and 27th were also very hot, but somewhat mollified by gentle breezes. During the days of the 26th and 27th several persons on and about our place were more or less affected by the scorching sun.

The warmest days were scarcely relieved by even one degree variation from the highest point of the mercury until sunset.

On the 8th and 25th a much higher degree of heat was indicated by some other thermometers not far from us, which was, probably, attributable to the ever-varying circumstances of different positions.

Notwithstanding the heated terms and perturbations, we have had a portion of very fine, comfortable weather. Our cherries have ripened beautifully under the influence of the sun's rays, and our heavy hay crop is being nicely secured, and our vegetables doing extremely well.

Yours, respectfully,
SATURDAY, July 3, 1858. M. DAME, Warden.

Board of Education.

The Board of Education met Wednesday afternoon. After reading the minutes of the previous meeting, a communication was received from the School Officers of the Tenth Ward, concerning the painting, furnishing, &c., of Ward School No. 7, in the Tenth Ward. The Board then adopted a resolution appropriating $2,743 for that purpose. A similar communication from the School Officers of the Eleventh Ward was received, and the Board passed a resolution appropriating $1,366 for furnishing some new class-rooms in Ward School No. 15, in the Eleventh Ward. A resolution was offered to make an appropriation of $820 for painting School-house in the Sixth Ward. Upon motion of Mr. SINCLAIR, it was amended so as to read $920, and passed.

Mr. MACKRAN offered a resolution asking permission to advertise for proposals to build a new school at Fort Washington. Referred to the Committee on Furniture. The School officers of the Fourteenth Ward asked for permission to advertise for proposals for heaters for Ward School No. 31. After some debate permission was granted.

The Board then passed a resolution making an appropriation of $12,945 65, to enable the school officers of the Ninth Ward to erect a new school-house in that Ward.

Several other communications from different Wards were referred to various Committees.

A report was presented by a Committee, stating that upon an examination they had found the reading of the Bible was fully excluded from twelve of the schools in this City, and partially from one other. This has been done by the authority of the local Board, and by individual teachers. There seems to be no reasonable ground to suppose that it would be restored, and the Committee asked the Board to pass a resolution making it obligatory on all the schools that some portion of the Holy Scriptures be read each day. The report was laid upon the table by a vote of 16 to 13.

A communication was received from Mrs. SHERIDAN complaining that her girl ROSA ANN had been "put in danger of a sun struck" by not being allowed to wear her bonnet in the play ground. Referred to the Committee of the Seventeenth Ward.

Another communication from Mr. S. F. COWDREY, whose son is in the Free Academy, and who by his permission had gone to the yacht race, without asking consent of the Principal of the Academy. In consequence the boy had been marked with demerits.

Mr. COWDREY felt aggrieved at such treatment, and wished the Board to remit the punishment.

After a long discussion, in which it was stated that many boys attended the Free Academy from out the county, and even out of the State, the communication was referred to the Committee on the Free Academy, with instructions to report also how many boys attended the Free Academy who did not reside here.

Mr. ADAMS offered a resolution that the Board order that all schools be opened by reading a certain portion of the Scriptures. Objected to and laid over.

Mr. MACKRAN offered a resolution, the object of which was to inquire if there is any law requiring the reading of the Scriptures in the Schools. Objected to and laid over.

The Committee on Sites and Houses presented a report in favor of an application from the Fifteenth Ward for permission to advertise for proposals for a new house on the site of School No. 10. After much discussion, the report was adopted.

After some unimportant business, the Board adjourned.

Monument to the late Dr. Kelly.

A unique monument in memory of the late Dr. WILLIAM KELLY, of the Blackwell's Island Hospital, may be seen at the marble yard of Mr. C. J. INSLEE, on the corner of the Bowery and Third-street. Dr. KELLY, it will be remembered, was lost in the same gale which destroyed the steamer San Francisco. He was born in the town of Charlton, Saratoga County, prepared for College at Schenectady, and subsequently entered Union College, where he graduated in 1841. After graduation he was appointed Fellow in that institution, and in 1845 took charge of the Union College Grammar School, in connection with Mr. DAVID H. CRITTENDEN, of this City, now so closely identified with the educational interests of the State. At the same time he began the study of Medicine with Dr. A. M. VEDDER, and in 1848 took the degree of Doctor in Medicine at the venerable College of Physicians and Surgeons, and was appointed Assistant Physician to Bellevue Hospital. He was soon after placed in charge of the Institutions on Blackwell's Island, where he secured the confidence of the Board of Governors, the esteem of the profession, and the love of all who knew him.

The entire height of the monument is 16 feet. It consists of a Corinthian column of Italian marble, 13 feet high, standing upon a cubic base of the same material, and separated from it by a narrow plinth. The shaft seems riven by a thunder bolt, from the capital nearly to the base, while from the centre rises a delicate cross in full relief. The interpretation of this design is plain. The very shock which in an instant converted the fair fabric into a ruin, disclosed also, deeply implanted in its substance, the ground and the emblem of the Christian's hope. The cross alone stands secure; amid desolation and ruin and death it still extends its friendly arms and beckons lost man beneath its shadow. The panels of the base are inscribed as follows; on the first:

WILLIAM KELLY, M. D.,
Late Physician-in-Chief of the Blackwell's Island Hospitals,
New-York City;
Who sailed for Havre in the ship Constitution, and was lost off Cape Hatteras, Dec. 29, 1853.
Ætat XXXIII.

On the second:

"THE BELOVED PHYSICIAN."

On the third:

"Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again."

On the remaining panel an elaborate bas-relief, represents a ship foundering at sea, struggling with the waves against destruction, while through the lowering clouds a single star looks down upon the waste of waters, and sends a faint ray of hope to the sinking ship. The first and fourth panels tell a truthful tale to the most casual observer; the second, that to those unfortunates for whom the world has so little charity, but to whom he devoted the best years of his Hospital service, he was indeed "The Beloved Physician." The third affords consolation to those whom he has left behind.

It was designed by Dr. J. N. OTIS, well known for many years as Surgeon of the United States Mail Steamship Illinois, but more recently of the Moses Taylor. Dr. O. was an intimate friend and Hospital associate of Dr. KELLY. The successful execution of the work is due to Mr. C. J. INSLEE. The monument will remain standing in the yard of Mr. INSLEE for two weeks, after which it will be removed to Utica, to be erected as a cenotaph.

The Northwestern Dispensary sends no report.

During the month of June, as above shown, medical and surgical services, vaccination and medicine were afforded gratuitously to 11,918 persons. The principal causes of death were Marasmus and Phthisis. The prevailing diseases chiefly affected the Respiratory and Cutaneous systems. Among the most important were Phthisis, Scarlatina and Measles.

Police Intelligence.

ANOTHER ASSAULT BY BILLY MULLIGAN.—Billy Mulligan, the noted pugilist and sporting character, who was expelled from San Francisco by the Vigilance Committee, and who recently committed a flagrant assault at the Metropolitan Hotel, upon Hiram N. Webb, Esq., a leading member of the Committee, finds it impossible to keep his fighting propensities in proper check. At a late hour Wednesday evening, as he was walking up Broadway, in the vicinity of the New-York Hotel, he encountered a Mr. James F. Warren talking to a lady whom he had previously known. In a moment he drew back his fist, Mr. Warren not having the slightest intimation of his intention, and hit Mr. Warren a savage blow on the side of the head, levelling him with the pavement. After Mr. Warren had fallen, he beat and struck him twice. It was all the work of a moment. Some bystanders caught Mulligan and held on to him till a Policeman hove in sight, into whose hands they delivered him. Mr. Warren was assisted to his residence, but his injuries are not regarded as serious. Yesterday morning Mulligan was taken before Justice QUACKENBUSH, when he gave bail in $1,000 to answer for his conduct. Mr. John Petrie, of No. 143 west Thirty-fourth-street, became his surety. Obtaining bail was quite nessary to make him appear before the Court of General Sessions, for assaulting Mr. Webb.

ASSAULT UPON A LAGER-BIER ARTIST—A JEALOUS BARKEEPER.—A pretty girl, named Catharine Kerrigan, has been doing the sentimental and operatic singing in the lager-bier saloon No. 127 Grand-street. Her singing and beautiful face excited wonderfully the admiration of a young man who became a frequent visitor at the place, and whose attentions the fair young singer received with manifest approbation. The barkeeper in the saloon became jealous of the smiles bestowed upon the visitor. On Wednesday evening his jealous fit reached its culminating point, and he violently assauited the girl, dragged her to the door, and thrust her off the stoop into the street. This was between 11 and 12 o'clock, when there was but one or two in the place. The girl was picked up nearly insensible from the effect of her injuries, taken to the Station-House, and thence removed to her residence, No. 64 Spring-street.

ALLEGED BURGLARS AND RECEIVER ARRESTED.—Two young men, giving their names as John Cahill and Edward Kennedy, were arrested yesterday by the Detective Police, charged with having a few nights since broken into the dwelling-house of Mr. Lindinheim, No. 177 East Seventeenth-street, and carried away among other things some rosewood chairs valued at $75 each. The burglars sold the chairs for a trifling sum to Patrick Muller, of No. 246 East Eighteenth-street. Muller was taken in custody, and together with the burglars taken to the Lower Police Court and committed for examination.

BIGAMY.—Simon Reiner, a well-dressed and good-looking young German, was, on Wednesday, locked up in the Tombs on a charge of bigamy. It is alleged that on the 5th inst. he married Miss Anne Love, of Newark, while he had a wife living in this city, to whom he was married about five years ago.

Mayor's Office—TUESDAY, July 5.

Sergeant Berney has returned to New-York, and is actively engaged in the war upon the policy backers. On Wednesday a descent was made upon No. 382 Cherry-street, kept by George Stuntz, who backs the books of upwards of forty shops in New-York and Brooklyn. All his books, amounting to about fifty, were seized. He and his clerks were taken before the Mayor. The clerks were held to bail in $500, and the principal in $2,000, to answer at the General Sessions. Some new avenues to action and new tactics are now open to the Police.

George Lysons arrived in this City on the 6th inst, with the intention of embarking for Liverpool, and purchased a ticket from the office of No. 109 West-street, kept by Stephen Gordon. He gave $270 for it, the proper price being only $200. Officer Van Arsdale succeeded in recovering the whole amount.

BODY PICKED UP IN THE STREAM.—A boat's crew of the Harbor Police, yesterday morning, discovered the body of a man floating in the water off the Battery. The deceased was dressed in black pants and a black alpaca coat, and from papers found in his possession, is believed to be Wm. Robertson, of Hoboken, who fell from a ferry boat at the foot of Barclay-street. A pocket-book containing nearly $20, and a watch was found upon him.

FERRY-BOAT ACCIDENT.—A man named JOHN MARRA, on Wednesday evening, in attempting to jump on to a Barclay-street ferry-boat after it had left the bridge, fell into the water and was drowned. The body was recovered about an hour after the accident.

Brooklyn Items.

THE LONG ISLAND RAILROAD.—The receipts of fare from passengers who passed over this road on the 3d inst., amounted to about $3,000—about one-half of which sum was taken at the ticket-office in Atlantic-street, and the balance by the conductors on the trains. There was a large quantity of freight passed over the road the same day. This is the best day's work this road has ever had.

DEADLY ASSAULT.—Mr. ISAAC B. REMSEN, while walking with some ladies on Main-street, Jamaica, Monday evening last, was attacked by a colored man from Brooklyn, named DAVID SMITH, and beaten and cut by him severely. The offender had not been arrested at last accounts. The only provocation was that Mr. REMSEN asked SMITH and a number of his associates, who were blocking up the sidewalk, to stand aside so that the ladies could pass.

THE CASE OF GALLAGHER.—The bill of exceptions in the case of PATRICK GALLAGHER, convicted of killing HUGH KELLY, at No. 12 Fulton-street, last year, was called up for argument in the General Term, before Judges BROWN, EMOTT and LOTT. Counsel for prisoner, S. GARRISON, Esq., not being ready to proceed, the case was postponed until September, when the argument will take place in Poughkeepsie.

HORSE KILLED.—Yesterday morning, as the Long Island train was approaching the depôt at Bedford, a horse attached to a milk wagon became frightened and jumped upon the track. Before the train could be stopped, the wheels of the locomotive had passed over the horse, killing him instantly. The driver of the horse escaped without injury.

LARGE ROBBERY.—The residence of Mrs. FITZPATRICK, No. 149 Willoughby-street, was entered by a thief Wednesday night last, and robbed of $1,500 and various articles of clothing. The Police have a clue to the thief, and expect to arrest him.

CAUTION TO SHOPKEEPERS.—Proprietor of store No. 101 Fulton-street, was arrested yesterday, and fined $25 by Justice VOORHIES, for violating a city ordinance by obstructing the side-walk with merchandise in front of his premises.

A LITTLE TOO CHEAP.—A butcher proposes to furnish Kings County with fifty thousand pounds of fresh beef at 4½ cents. The contract calls for choice and good meat.

THE CLAM QUESTION.—Hereafter, any person catching soft clams in Gravesend Bay, in any month of the year without an "r" in it, is liable to a fine of $10.

A new small-pox hospital is to be erected forthwith, at the County-farm at Flatbush. The building used for that purpose now, is too small and very inconvenient.

Steamer Galena Burned—Five Lives Lost!

From the Red Wing (Min.) Republican, July 1.

This morning, at about 1 o'clock, as the U. S. Mail packet Galena landed at our levee, a fire broke out about her smoke stacks, which soon spread, and resulted in her total destruction. The origin of the fire no one is able to ascertain, though it is supposed it was communicated to where it was first discovered from the furnaces of the boilers below.

The loss of the boat is complete. Little or no baggage was saved, and the freight and mails, with the exception of a portion of the latter destined for Red Wing, were wholly consumed. The passengers, many of them, are in a destitute condition, having lost their all, even to their last garment.

The loss of the boat is estimated at $50,000; no insurance. The cargo was small, and not particularly valuable; uninsured. A small amount of money was saved from the safe.

PERSONS KNOWN TO BE LOST.—Mrs. Polly Porter, Miss Nancy Porter, Charles Porter, (boy,) Lydia Porter, all of Michigan, bound to Mankato; John Tyson.

THURSDAY, July 8—P. M.

In our commercial summary of yesterday, an important error occurred in footing the total of goods marketed at New-York for the year 1858. We therefore repeat the comparative figures with the correction:

1857	Total Entries	$219,741,000
	Warehoused, net	34,325,000
	Marketed at New-York	$185,416,000
1858	Total Entries	$162,159,000
	Taken from Warehouse, net	25,711,000
	Marketed at New-York	$187,870,000

The steamship Africa from Liverpool, Saturday, June 26, arrived at this port at noon today. Her market advices are only three days later than previously received by the City of Washington. The English Funds were a fraction higher, though without activity, Consols closing on Friday 95¾ ℔ cent. ex-dividend. Cotton, toward the close of the week, had recovered its firmness, and the sales were 45,000 bales for the whole week, mostly at the full quotations of the previous report. Orleans middlings are called 6¾d. There was continued dullness in the markets for Grain and Flour, and the demand at Liverpool was of a retail character. The Manchester trade accounts are better, and these had helped Cotton at Liverpool. In the London Money Market the improved demand at 3 ℔ cent. was esteemed a sign of something like returning activity to general trade. American Stocks were better by 2@3 ℔ cent. for Illinois Central shares, and firmer on New-York Central. There were good buyers of Illinois Central in London, at the recent decline, on the assumption that the additional assessment strengthens, rather than weakens, the future of the stock, besides clearing off a costly and embarassing floating debt. On this subject the circular of Mr. E. F. SATTERTHWAITE, Broker in American Stocks, reports:

"The holders of Illinois Central shares were considerably startled by the sudden announcement on the 22d, that a call of $20 ℔ share would be made. The effect was greater from the circumstance of its coming so soon after the issue of Mr. FISHER'S report, in which he stated the Company could provide from accruing funds sufficient to pay its obligations up to January, 1859; the shares which had been flat about 16 discount, suddenly fell to 25 discount, from which there has been a recovery of 2½ ℔ cent., owing to large buyers coming forward. The making of this call we regard as sound policy on the part of the Directors, and, in reality, will inure to the benefit of the shareholders; as, by it, the Company will be relieved from on annual payment of $244,949 for interest, and probably even more, as exorbitant rates for carrying the large floating debt will be avoided."

The Bank of England return for the week ending June 23 shows a gain of $565,000 in Specie, and a steadier line of loans on mercantile and other private securities, which, in consequence of the lower rates of discount in the open market for some months past, had run down from $159,000,000 in December to $73,000,000 in June. There is now a little more use for Money at the Bank's rate of 3 ℔ cent. The British Board of Trade returns continue to show a falling off in the value of exports. The return for May is short of last year $5,585,000. The whole decline since Jan. 1 is $34,845,000, as compared with the heavy trade of the ear y part of 1857. The reduction, however, is less than half a million of dollars as compared with 1856. The export of Cotton fabrics this year is an exception to the general falling off in May. This item exceeds the value of Cotton Goods exported in May, 1857.

The demand for Stocks at the early meeting of the Brokers, to-day, was quite strong again, the full advance of yesterday, and, in some instances, a further rise of ¼@½ ℔ cent. being paid on most of the Railways. The actual done business in the Western shares was much larger than usual of late, while the dealings in New-York Central were again free. As the first call of the list progressed, a disposition was evinced to meet the market at the handsome advance established yesterday, and before the close of the session, the demand for Central and Rock Island showed some abatement, and both Stocks, at the Second Board, were lower, Central leaving off 83⅜, as against 84¼ on Wednesday afternoon, and Rock Island 74⅜ as against 75⅜ On the other hand, the inquiry for Galena and Chicago continued stiff, and 87½@87¼ ℔ cent. was paid for the cash stock, and 87 seller 30 days. Panama Road and Pacific Mail Shares were both firm and higher, and an advance of 2 ℔ cent. was established on Michigan Central. The bids for Reading were quite full, without bringing out sellers to any extent, at 46¼@46½ ℔ cent. There was less business in State Stocks, Missouris 84¾. The sales of La Crosse Land Grants opened at 34¾ cash, and left off 33½, seller 15 days. Illinois Central improved after the foreign news, and the stock was not offered under 78 ℔ cent. at the close, On the general market, after the Second Board printed list, the brokers reported a dull tone.

There is nothing new in Money affairs today. The next packet for Europe is the Ariel sailing on Saturday. Exchange since the sailing of the Persia is quiet. We find, on further inquiry, that our quotations for francs for the Persia was rather higher than the rate at which a good deal of the business was done. It should have been—for first-class bills, 5.13¾@5.12½ to the dollar.

The Railway Conferences, to which reference was made yesterday, adjourned to-day until Thursday next, July 15, to enable the President of the Erie Company to submit the propositions agreed upon, in his presence, by the other three lines, and which, we understand, have taken a form to meet, as nearly as may be, the views urged by Mr. MORAN previous to the late disagreement. The officers present from the Central, Pennsylvania and Baltimore Roads were ready yesterday to commit their several Companies to the proposed arrangement, but the President of the Erie declined to do so without advice from his Board of Directors, and the adiournment for a week was made to meet this suggestion. If any further serious difficulty is encountered in the restoration of good feeling, it will probably grow out of the stock-jobbing position of one or more of the Erie managers, who have been short sellers of Central, as well as their own shares, both before and since the disagreement, as they were last Summer under a similar quarrel of their own making.

The half-yearly dividend of the New-Orleans Canal Bank is 5 ℔ cent. The New-York holders will be paid Aug. 2. The Butchers' and Drovers' Bank 5 ℔ cent., payable July 15.

The City of Cleveland is now paying off the arrearages of interest due on that portion of the City Debt issued to the Cleveland and Pittsburg Road.

The half-yearly dividend of the Columbia Fire Insurance Company is 6 ℔ cent.; the New-York Equitable 12 ℔ cent.; the Continental Fire 6 ℔ cent. on the capital, and a scrip division of 50 ℔ cent. on the premiums of the last year, to be divided among the policy holders Aug. 10; Republic Fire 3½ ℔ cent., on demand; Hope Fire 5 ℔ cent., on demand.

The collections made by the Illinois Central Company in the month of June, on account of the land sales of 1855–6, now falling due, amount to $63,643. The Company purchased and canceled $49,000 of their mortgage bonds, out of the proceeds of these collections. The original mortgages are reduced by this process, thus far, $791,000.

The old incorporated banks in Tennessee, the Union and Planters', have resumed payments in Specie, in anticipation of the required time designated by the Legislature. The following is the present state of the last-named Bank:

FOREIGN COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

London Markets.

Per Africa.] LONDON, Friday, June 25—5 P. M.

In our Colonial and Foreign PRODUCE markets there has been a fair business, with little alteration in prices. There
